When to Inflate? Now.
Said the Taxi Driver.
Strikes, and Problems.
Sparks Flying.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A SENATOR who called upon President Roosevelt to discuss inflation to supply a few more dollars, after having created a terrific vacuum with NRA expenditures, etc., reports that the President said he was "waiting to do the inflating in the right way."

At least 50,000,000 Americans, NOT including the note-shaving crowd, whose business is dealing in money, some of whom appear to have access to the President, believe that the "right way" to inflate would be to inflate NOW.

"That would get your goat. Here I have been driving four hours without picking up a passenger and now a second one calls me and I can't take him. And there is the tax on taxi rides that will have to be paid to make things worse. I see they are afraid to tax the big men in the stock exchange."

He was told:

"Tell your taxicab friends they need not make that complaint if they would learn to stick together as stock exchange men stick together.

"Of stock brokers there are a few more than one thousand. Of you taxicab drivers there are seventy-five thousand. With your families and friends you might control almost any New York election.

"But you split up on election day. Financial gentlemen never split up, never forget friends, forgive enemies. Imitate them."

POLICEMEN and taxicab drivers are workmen. The policeman in cheerful cold blood hands the taxi driver a summons that means the loss of a day's work and a fine that means hardship.

And they all wonder why they don't amount to much in the total scheme of things. Gentlemen of high finance do not "bawl each other out" or crowd each other. They know better. That is why they are in high finance. As a rule they were not born there.

STRIKES multiply. All tool makers and die makers in Detroit vote to strike, bakery drivers striking in Philadelphia, upset wagons, striking miners are marching to picket the Carnegie Steel plant with heavily armed police following and watching.

Government can tell the one "big man," head of an industry, what he shall do about payrolls, hours, wages. It is not so easy to tell the millions of individual workers.

You cannot indict a whole industry.

EMPLOYERS THAT signed NRA codes expecting happiness, peace and plenty are puzzled, as they walk and wonder, inside of gates picketed by strikers.

The employers reply that the workers make demands far beyond limits fixed by NRA codes.

It is a difficult problem for Gen. Johnson and his hard working assistants. Easy to lead a horse to the NRA water; hard to make him drink.

RUSSIA AND Germany become gradually more unfriendly, unpleasant sparks flying. Russia has expelled German newspaper correspondents, not liking what they write. Berlin protests to the Russian government.

Before Russia acted, Germany had arrested Russian correspondents covering the Reichstag arson trial with much sympathy for the accused Communists. Russia also has grave dispute with Japan, and Germany with Mussolini, who is "showing great patience."

RING LARDNER'S death is a serious loss to intelligent newspaper work, and to useful citizenship. In a nation more easily influenced by satire than by invective, he did great good, exposing sham of various kinds. And what is more important, he was a man of really fine talent. His death is a national misfortune.

WHEN AN editor wants to emphasize his meaning he can only underscore words or print them in big type. Japan's army has a better emphasis. It warned Peiping authorities that Gen. Fang must withdraw from the non-military zone in North China.

Yesterday by way of emphasis three heavy Japanese bombing planes, armed with machine guns, their racks for explosive bombs or gas bombs all filled, flew over the Peiping legation quarter, only two hundred feet above the roof.

This made Europeans a little nervous, a bomb might drop accidentally. Japan expresses the pious hope that a "mere demonstration" will be sufficient.

LADIES OF the "exposition of women's art and industries" abandoned politics for a minute to discuss "beautifying the male" and decided to recommend "the legitimate use of cosmetics by men." Will they also advise waist-squeezing corsets for the fat and high heels for the short?

Men, ugly enough, and foolish enough now without assistance from these good ladies, can beautify themselves sufficiently by working harder, eating and drinking less, and breathing more fresh air.

PRISON RIOT FLARES, 20 CLUBBED

Eastern Pen Scene Of Worst Disorder In Century

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Flaming riot set off by revolt against punishment for bitter convict fights swept Eastern Penitentiary last night, throwing the prison into one of the worst turmoils in its century of history.

While smoke and flames from burning mattresses arose in cells and corridors, practically the entire prison population of about 1,500 "long timers" for more than three hours kept the institution in disorder, screaming and smashing their cell furnishings.

Warden Herbert J. (Hard-Boiled) Smith, groping through the smoke in an attempt to quell the riot, was almost felled by two blows on the head by a piece of steel cot wielded through cell bars by an enraged convict. Fifteen stitches were taken in his wounds.

CONVICTS CLUBBED

More than 300 city police, state troopers who dashed here from the Reading and other barracks and three fire companies finally brought the riot under control by half-drowning some convicts with streams of water from high pressure hose, clubbing those who persisted.

Warden Smith, a veteran of many fierce battles in his former service with the state police, said about 20 convicts were beaten, 10 requiring hospital care.

During the height of the riot an electric cable was either cut by a convict or burned by flames. Part of the interior was thrown into darkness.

ARMED CAMP!

Inside and out, the great, gray stone pile became an armed camp before the rioters were subdued.

Smith said the trouble began last Sunday among some of the most vicious convicts with whom guards had been having trouble. The malcontents lost prison privileges and were segregated, but in marching to mess on Sunday several of their leaders started a fight.

Quiet reigned in the grim, gray inclosure as the convicts, except those "in solitary," were marched to the mess hall for breakfast today.

Deputy Warden Meikranz blamed the uprising on "long sentences and overcrowding." He said:

DEATH TAKES THOMPSON AT 79

Former Coal Baron Virtually Broke As Life Ends

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 27.—Josiah V. Thompson, once one of the country's richest coal barons, died today, virtually broke.

The one-time multi-millionaire became unconscious last night and died at his once palatial home at Oak Hill, near Uniontown. He was 79.

A year ago, not long after he had served 10 days in jail for contempt of court, Thompson was stricken with paralysis, from which he never fully recovered.

COLORFUL CAREER

The rise of Josiah V. Thompson from obscure small-town banker to one of the richest men in Western Pennsylvania and one of the biggest speculators in coal land futures and his later crash from affluence, forms one of the most vivid tales ever recounted in Fayette County.

"J. V.," as he was known to thousands, came of Revolutionary stock. Long before the Revolutionary War, William Thompson, great-grandfather of J. V. Thompson, member of the Big Spring Presbyterian Church, near Chambersburg, struck out into the wilderness. He settled at what is now Mt. Pleasant.

He saw service in the Revolutionary Army and married the daughter of John Jack, who later helped to draft the declaration of Hannastown.

Thompson later went to Kentucky, where he became a comrade of Daniel Boone. Andrew Finley Thompson, grandfather of Josiah V., was born in Kentucky and saw service in the War of 1812. He came to Westmoreland County for his bride and returned

5,000 MEN OUT, MILLS PICKETED

Steubenville Workers Vote to Call Out Forces There

WEIRTON, W. Va., Sept. 27.—More than 5,000 employes of the Weirton Steel Company were on "holiday" here today as a result of what leaders of the walkout termed a conflict between company and independent unions.

All departments of the Weirton plant were closed except the open hearth and trip mill. Four hundred employes of the Steubenville plant of the company met at noon in Moose Hall, Steubenville, and voted to strike in sympathy with Weirton workers, and planned to picket the Steubenville plant with the object of forcing it to close.

Pickets swarmed over the streets of Wierton as state troopers and Sheriff J. H. Tope, of Hancock County, with 18 deputies guarded against disorder.

William J. Long, president of the Weirton local, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, and other leaders of the "holiday," sent a telegram to Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, asking that representatives of the department be sent to investigate conditions in Weirton and also violations of the NRA code.

'COMPANY UNION'

Long declared the walkout was a "holiday" to enforce recognition of the Amalgamated Association by the Wierton Steel Company. The company, he asserted, had refused to meet with representatives of the association and would deal only with leaders of the "company union."

A statement issued from the office of the company said the plant was operating under the company union plan, taht it had always treated with representatives of this organization, and that no complaints or demands had been submitted by accredited representatives of the company organization.

Long asserted that the "holiday" would extend not only to Steubenville, but also to Clarksburg and to plants in Michigan, owned by the National Steel Corporation, of which the Weirton company is a subsidiary.

WEIR CONSULTED

E. T. Weir, of Pittsburgh, president of the National Steel Corporation, is understood to have been consulted with reference to the statement issued by the company. John Williams, president of the Weirton Steel Company, is in Wales on a vacation. The company's plants here are in charge of F. A. Hanlin, vice president.

Every Soft Coal Field In Western Penna. Hit By Walkout

International News Service.

Bituminous coal mining operations in 10 Western Pennsylvania counties were virtually paralyzed today by the tightening grip of the soft coal "holiday" as the walkout mushroomed through practically the entire region. Union leaders estimated 70,000 men have laid down their tools.

A complete tie-up of all mining activity in Western Pennsylvania by tomorrow night was predicted by John Ghizzoni of Homer City, member of the international board of the United Mine Workers of America.

INVADE FIELD

He said the holiday fever was spreading like wildfire and had gotten completely out of the hands of the union.

From the coke region, following yesterday's failure of pickets to force closing of the Carnegie Steel Company's Clairton by-product coke plant, came the report that "holiday" miners were being mobilized for a march against the steel mills of the Pittsburgh district later in the week.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 27.—Heartened by their "holiday" picnic to Clairton yesterday and by Gov. Gifford Pinchot's attitude of sympathy in their struggle to force the H. C. Yesterday's demonstration, lacking organization, brought out only a handful of pickets—too few to accomplish anything against an army of police, according to leaders. Ten thousand miners will MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 27.—An army of more than 500 officers and vigilantes today were scouring Northern Indiana for 10 desperate armed convicts who escaped from the State Penitentiary here, taking as hostage Sheriff Charles Neel of Harrison County.

Officers directing the manhunt expressed fears for the safety of Sheriff Neel after residents northwest of Vaparaiso sighted four of the convicts who had seized Neel. As the felons fled into a woods near Liberty Center witnesses noted that the sheriff was no longer in the group.

One hundred possemen surrounded the wooded tract.

KELLY RAGES IN CELL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—George (Machine Gun) Kelly, raging "bad man" trapped through a young girl's tip, glowered in an all-steel cage today and muttered defiance to authority.

The outlaw from the Southwest vowed to fight extradition to Oklahoma City to stand trial for the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man.

Meanwhile, John M. Keith, a special agent of the Department of Justice, announced that Langford Ramsey, attorney and former brother-in-law of "Machine Gun" Kelly, confessed today that Kelly had sent him to Coleman, Tex., to get part of the Urschel ransom money, $73,250 of which was recovered on a farm near Coleman today.

Lonely Officer Held for Fire Alarm Quiz

A policeman walking a lonely beat out in Hays doesn't have many opportunities for excitement, and perhaps he can't be blamed if he sends for the fire engines.

At any rate, Patrolman John W. Cahill was suspended today by Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuaide, and will be heard by the Police Trial Board.

McQuaide said that a dozen false alarms have come in from Cahill's beat recently, and he suspects that the patrolman himself sent in the calls, just for fun.

BANDITS HOLDUP AUTO COUPLES

Five bandits, in a machine believed stolen shortly before, held up the two couples, robbed them of jewelry and money and made good their escape, according to Police Chief Thomas R. Bennett, of Hampton Township.

Bennett reported that when he stopped his motorcycle in the road to reprimand couples for parking along the highway he was informed of the stickups by George Pfusch, of 107 Rustic avenue, Mt. Oliver.

Pfusch said his companions were Rose Patterson, 19, of 124 Erin street, a maid; Wanda Parker, 20, of 15 South Fifteenth street, and a man whose name, he said, "it wouldn't be smart to tell."

Man's Career of Crime Blamed on Operation

Theory that an operation performed three years ago changed a good citizen to a safe-cracking deperado within a month was revealed here today.

In Pittsburgh arranging for the return of the body of Herndon J. Norman, 32, salesman killed as he attempted to escape from North Side police a month ago, to West Virginia for burial, Ira N. Stump, undertaker representing Mrs. Clara Ferrell, of Grantville, W. Va., Norman's sisterf, said:

"I knew Norman for years, and until three and a half years ago, when he underwent an operation for mastoid and sinus, he was a model citizen, a church-goer and a good father of four children.

"Immediately after the operation he began to behave in a strange manner, and within a month developed criminal tendencies. His wife divorced him."

..orman, wanted in Clarksburg, W. Va., for safe blowing, was placed under arrest dby Motorcycle Patrolman Harry Foster and Clarksburg police as he visited his children at 202 East North avenue, North Side, August 29. Later, in an attempt to escape, he was shot and killed. An inquest is to be held October 4.

Art Jury Arrives Here Ready for 'Sacrifice'

Prepared to sacrifice themselves on the altar of pure art, three art gallery directors arrived today to judge 351 paintings entered in the Carnegie Institute's thirty-first international exhibition.

Said C. Powell Minnigerode, of the Corcoran Galleries, Washington, D. C.:

"Our choice is almost certain not to be a popular one. Nine-tenths of the people who see these shows still want photographic likenesses. If a picture is like something they have seen before and is on an agreeable subject, they'll like it; otherwise, they won't."

Robert V. Harshe, of the Chicago Art Institute, commented:

"Quite right."

"Quite right."

Then the judges agreed that they would consider all paintings solely on artistic merit, without regard to popular appeal, nationality or past performance of the artist.

Among the paintings awaiting their judgment are entries from 10 European nations and the United States. In style they range from the esoteric subtleties of surrealism to the forthright draftsmanship of the academicians, with every shade of approach sandwiched between.

The exhibition opens October 19 and will continue until December 10.

ROOSEVELT SET ON CREDIT EXPANSION THROUGH BANKS

INFLATIONARY MOVEMENT HITS SNAG

President in Parley With Monetary Expert

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt left his East Sixty-fifth street home today for his residence at Hyde Park, obviously confident of the national recovery drive and ready to lay down the terms for putting the credit to work to make success assured.

A series of talks with financial leaders convinced his advisers that he was about to make known his desires for expanding credit through regular channels as the alternative to outright currency inflation.

STRAUS CALLS

One caller alone was received while the President was in the city—Jesse I. Straus, Ambassador to France. His call was regarded unofficially as meaning that France was considering the two defaulted war debts payments to the United States.

The immediate object of the President's visit to the metropolis last night was to have a family reunion and say goodbye to his eldest son, James, who sailed at midnight for Europe with his wife, Betsy. James is going to London and then to Paris on a trip described as a vacation. There is speculation whether he will go to Russia but there is no confirmation of it.

MONEY EXPERT

Significance is attached here to the halt of the Roosevelt special train yesterday at Trenton to permit Prof. James H. Rogers, of Yale, to depart on an unexpected return trip to Washington.

Rogers, with Prof. George Warren, of Cornell, made a secret study of the domestic monetary situation early this summer. Then each professor made an individual survey abroad. Yesterday was the first opportunity Rogers had to report on this study. He was sent back immediately to Washington.

BRITONS SAIL ON DEBT TRIP

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, chief economic adviser to the government, sailed today for the United States, where he expects to see President Roosevelt personally concerning the projected new war debts settlement. He said:

"I am visiting America to observe the feeling toward the question of the war debts, and I expect I shall be presented with an opportunity of discussing the position with President Roosevelt, although for the moment he is very busily engaged with internal problems.

"My plans are indefinite. At present I am not in position to say how long I shall likely be away."

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador at Washington, and T. K. Bewley, Treasury official who has been attached to the Washington embassy, sailed with Sir Frederick on the Majestic.

INFLATIONISTS PUT ON BRAKES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—All advocates of inflation were urged yesterday by Senator Thomas, (Dem.) of Oklahoma, a leader of the campaign for cheaper money, to quiet their clamor to permit full trial of President Roosevelt's credit expansion program.

Thomas predicted the credit program would fail to lift and stabilize price levels.

He told newspapermen he would talk over his own proposal for a temporary cessation of the inflation agitation with various farm leaders who have come to the capital to campaign for the currency expansion.

The Thomas assertion came shortly after Senator Bulkley, (Dem.) of Ohio, a member of the banking committee, had said following a conference with Mr. Roosevelt that inflation by issuing treasury notes "within modest limits won't do any harm."

BAILEY-BATES DEFENSE ENDS

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Sept. 27.—Attorneys for Harvey J. Bailey, Albert L. Bates and the three Shannons from Texas—Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Shannon and their son, Armon—rested their case shortly before noon today at the trial in Federal Court of 10 defendants accused of conspiracy in connection with the $200,000 kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil millionaire.

This left only the defense of the five remaining St. Paul and Minneapolis defendants to be put into the record.

The government was confident it had proved that Bates and George ("Machine Gun") Kelly were the pair who "snatched" Urschel at the point of a machine gun from his home on the night of July 22; that $700 of the ransom money was found on Bailey when he was arrested at the Shannon ranch near Paradise, Tex., and that $700 of the money was found on Bates when he was arrested in Denver.

Kelly Planned String of Killings, Wife Says

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Capture of George (Machine Gun) Kelly forestalled a campaign of murders the desperado was planning, authorities learned today from his wife, Kathryn, who is charged jointly with Kelly in the Charles F. Urschel kidnaping. She said:

"You got him just in time to prevent a whole string of killings. He had his plans all laid and would have cleaned out the Oklahoma City outfit."

Defense Rests Case In Luer Kidnap Trial

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The defense in the trial of five men and a woman for kidnaping August Luer, wealthy Alton (Ill.) packer, rested today and the state began rebuttal testimony.

Percy Michael Fitzgerald, St. Louis ex-convict and confessed participant in the abduction of Luer, was the only defendant who did not take the stand in his own defense.

Lindys at Lenin's Tomb As 'Private Citizens'

MOSCOW, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh topped off a day of sightseeing in the Soviet capital with a visit last night to the Russian ballet, the "Red Poppy."

While Mrs. Lindbergh toured several Russian art museums and inspected a number of modern workers' homes, the Colonel was busy conferring with chiefs of the military and civil aviation services concerning the development of the industry, then was taken through a military aviation factory.

In the late afternoon the couple went together to visit Lenin's tomb.

Col. Lindbergh insisted his visit is "purely personal" and not intended as a good-will tour. He said:

"We didn't decide to come here until long after we left the United States. We are here merely because we wanted to see such an interesting country."

Regardless of the purpose of their visit, the Red capital insists on treating them as welcome celebrities from a foreign land. Moscow papers have been full of their travels and the Colonel's aviation exploits.

Monday night at the opera a man arose during intermission and shouted in Russian:

"Hurrah for Lindbergh."

The entire audience rose and applauded for several minutes. The couple bowed and smiled as someone whispered to them the significance of the gesture.

Official Moscow has said it attaches no political significance to their visit.

Gun" Kelly, Coleman was arrested.

Of the $200,000 paid in ransom for Urschel, a total of $79,650 has now been recovered.

RANSOM "SPLIT"

Keith said:

Bates is among those now on trial at Oklahoma City.

"The other money was divided among lesser participants."

"Kelly was broke when he got to Memphis. Every effort he made to gett he buried money near Coleman was thwarted. He attempted time and again to get it."

SNARLS 'NOT GUILTY'

Kelly and his auburn-haired wife, Kathryn, captured in a bungalow hideout yesterday, were hurriedly arraigned last night and charged with the Urschel kidnaping. United States Commissioner Brenner set their bond at $100,000 each.

Kelly snarled when the warrant was read:

"Not guilty."

His wife also denied the charges.

Just when the Kellys will be removed to Oklahoma City or what the next move of federal officers would be was not forthcoming as Keith took charge and ordered all officers to keep their silence.

Keith commented:

"Not long back, we had a massacre of officers in Kansas City in broad daylight. That was the result of too much talking. We don't intend to let anything like that happen in Memphis."

The officers had considered rushing the Kellys to Oklahoma City by plane before morning but Oklahoma authorities advised against this, suggesting that their removal be delayed until the conclusion of the trials there of a number of others accused in the Urschel kidnaping.

'CAN'T KEEP ME!'

Mrs. Kelly said she was ready to go back to Oklahoma City to stand trial. She added:

"I only came here to tell him (Kelly) that I would do so. I am absolutely innocent of any part in the kidnaping, and so are my parents."

Kelly sat in his cell peering into the muzzles of machine guns and various other armaments surrounding his all-steel cage. He told a guard to "tell the world that I will be out of this jail before long." He added as an afterthought:

"They got me, but keeping me is another matter."

A 12-year-old girl who had been accompanying Kelly and his wife and posing as their daughter gave officers the tip which led to the arrest.

PRICE CONTROL PUT UP TO ROOSEVELT

President Will Make Final Decision on Retail Code

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — A final decision on the price provision of the retail code—perhaps the most important problem yet to confront the NRA program—will be made by President Roosevelt himself.

This became known today as all available information on the code for 1,500,000 retailers was transmitted to the President for study.

In reaching a decision whether to permit the retail code to contain a provision against selling below wholesale cost, plus 10 per cent, and a resale limitation in the retain drug code, the President will have copius advice.

EXPERTS ACTIVE

Not only is Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, preparing a report despite his illness, but Deputy Administrator A. D. Whiteside, a retail trade expert, the consumers' advisory board and experts of the economic and planning division of the NRA have formulated advice.

On the one hand the President faced the opinion of 99.6 per cent of the retailers writing the NRA that the loss limitation provision is necessary to stabilize the business.

Against this he had the report of experts of the economic and planning board which declare the loss limitation, which they call price-fixing, not only will hurt merchants but endangers the whole NRA program. Consumers board experts take a like view.

The NRA also is regarded generally as being without power to force the retailers of the nation to accept a code, because the law is designed to cover interstate commerce.

SEEKING CODE

The retailers, however, are seeking a code. Unlike the coal operators, who at first balked at code proposals, they volunteered to come under the NRA program to help stabilize and speed business.

Reports that the President would seek a compromise plan designed to protect retailers against unfair price-cutting and at the same time meet the objections of NRA economists, were rife.

The President is expected to canvass all data at his Hyde Park estate. Administrator Johnson may go to the Roosevelt home for a conference before a final decision is reached.

SHIP DEAL QUIZ BARES FEE TO SLEMP

Former Coolidge Aide Asked $50,000, Got $15,000

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27. — (AP.)—The Senate committee investigating ocean air mail contracts was informed today by Henry Herberman, president of the Export Steamship Company, that C. Bascom Slemp, who once served as secretary to Calvin Coolidge when he was president, had rendered a bill for $50,000 for legal services in connection with the purchase by the company of 18 Shipping Board vessels.

The ships were purchased by the Export line for $1,171,431 after the Shipping Board had spent $1,825,718 in repairing them.

$15,000 PAID

Herberman, who late yesterday was unable to inform the committee as to attorneys' fees paid, today had handed to Senator Black, (Dem.), of Alabama, chairman of the investigating committee, a letter dated September 26, 1933, stating he paid Slemp $15,000 in two installments. Slemp once was a member of the House from Virginia.

The text of the letter read:

"With respect to your question about legal fees of Mr. Bascom Slemp in 1925, to the best of my recollection the question involved was the price per ton to be paid for shipping board vessels.

"The Export line offered something like $5 a ton and Admiral Palmer, speaking for the shipping board, asked $8.50 a ton. We compromised at $7.50 a ton and the shipping board drew up the contract on that basis.

$50,000 ASKED

"Mr. Slemp acted in connection with this matter and felt that his services were worth, as I recall, $50,000.

"I actually paid him $15,000, $3,000 on January 1, 1925, and $12,000 on January 19, 1925."

W. D. McLaughlin, of Long Island, former treasurer of the Export line, was questioned about payment of a $510 tailor bill through the Steers Terminal corporation, a subsidiary of the Export line. The bill, made out to T. V. O'Connor, former chairman of the shipping board, by J. Caliendo, of New York, and dated November 11, 1924, was identified by McLaughlin as one he had seen in the offices of the Export company in 1924.

McLaughlin made this statement after Senator Black had said the record showed the tailor bill has been paid for O'Connor.

GIRL THREATENS RICH WOMEN

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The name of Mrs. H. Clay Williams, wife of the president of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, of Winston-Salem, was added today to the list of prominent Carolina women from whom Willie Mae Wheeless, 15, attempted to extort money for a college education.

Federal officials said she was an intended victim along with Mrs. C. F. Harris, of Wadesboro, wife of a wealthy physician and businessman, and the late Mrs. E. A. Judd, of Spartansburg, S. C., who died several years ago.

Frank N. Littlejohn, chief of Charlotte detectives, said the investigation would be continued on the theory that the girl was not alone in the plot.

OFFICER, BRIDE TAKEN FOR RIDE

The newlywed Adrian Fedors, of Dormont, were appreciating the comforts of home today after a sojourn in the borough "cooler" last night.

As hundreds of excitement-searching residents jammed the street at 1625 Potomac avenue, Dormont police "stormed" the premises with tear gas and fire ladders, routed the pair from their apartment, gave them a "ride" and "sentenced" them. It was the force's idea of getting even with Fedor, a motorcycle patrolman, for trying to keep his marriage to Miss Bertha Jewel a secret.

INDICT LAWYER AS HOARDER

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Frederick Barber Campbell, attorney who yesterday filed suit to test the constitutionality of President Roosevelt's orders against gold hoarding, was indicted today by a federal grand jury on a charge of hoarding gold.

Campbell's suit was filed in Federal Court yesterday against the Chase National Bank to compel that institution to return to him 27 bars of gold bullion he said he had enrusted to the bank's care as custodian for hire.

Federal authorities here said that the indictment today made him the first defendant in a prosecution involving the gold hoarding act and executive order.

Although Campbell placed no value on the bullion in his complaint, the indictment returned today charged that he held gold bullion valued at $200,574.34, and is required by the act of Congress and the executive order to file a report concerning this with the Secretary of the Treasury, and to surrender it.

DAVIS DEFENSE GETS SETBACK AT TRIAL

Court Bars Proof of Claim Senator Dropped Duties

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Documentary evidence to support a defense contention that United States Senator James J. Davis had separated himself from active participation in Loyal Order of Moose activities prior to an alleged lottery was ruled out of his trial in Federal Court today.

The document, held to be immaterial by Judge Johnson Hayes, was the minutes of a meeting of the supreme council of the Moose on August 25, 1932. They contained a resolution approving the purported assignment by Davis of an organization contract to Joseph Jenkins and Fred W. Jones.

Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant United States attorney, argued that the meeting occurred long after the offense charged against Davis, and was therefore incompetent evidence. The court upheld him and the jury was not allowed to hear the resolution.

Davis' contract with the Moose was for life and it gave him the exclusive right to contract with local lodges for Moose recruiting. It was important to the prosecution because profits from an alleged lottery conducted under the name of "charity balls" in 1931 were paid to the organization department, and, therefore, the government contends, to Davis.

The defense claims that Davis assigned the contract to Jenkins and Jones in August, 1930, and was then no longer connected with the organization department.

Defense attorneys also sought to remove the sting from governmental evidence that concerned a gift of $125,000.

BULKLEY SEES STEADY DOLLAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Robert J. Bulkley, Ohio Democrat, who sailed for Europe today on the U. S. liner Washington, predicted that there would be no immediate change in the value of the dollar. He said:

"I do not look for any marked change in currency in the near future. I think the President has done exactly the right thing on the currency question, and I am with him. Going off gold had an inflationary effect, and we are not going to return to gold very readily."

Senator Bulkley, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, is going abroad to study currency matters and will spend about three weeks in informal conversations with London and Paris financial experts.

HUNTER SHOT BY RELATIVE

A Ben Avon man was wounded today when his brother-in-law mistook him for a groundhog while they were hunting in Allison Park, county detectives said.

He is Charles A. Kerr, 44, of 146 Monitor street, now in the Allegheny General Hospital with a bullet in his brain. He is not expected to live.

Kerr went to the farm of his brother-in-law, George Bartlett, 52, of McCandless Township, to get a 75-year-old cradle for his day-old granddaughter. The farm adjoins that of Senator James J. Coyne.

Bartlett told county detectives that he became separated from Kerr while they were hunting. Seeing what he said he thought was a groundhog near a tree stum, he fired his rifle, shooting Kerr in the head. Kerr corroborated the story in mumbling words at the hospital.

The cradale was for Roberta Grace, daughter of his son, Robert Kerr. She was born yesterday at the Suburban General Hospital.

'Little Black Book' Links 'Gov. Jim' in Aid Quiz

AUSTIN, Tex., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Entries of money in a "little black book" by James E. Ferguson, husband of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson, for eight months this year were in the record of the Texas Senate today as it investigated proceedings of the state rehabilitation and relief commission.

Frank W. Chudej, former business associate of Ferguson, testified that Ferguson had handed him $22,100 at various times and he read from what he said was a photostatic copy of a duplicate ledger sheet showing the deposits were made in the American National Bank here at intervals from January 4 to August 17.

Chudej said he deposited the money on instructions from Ferguson, in the accounts of Bosque Creamery and the Ferguson Forum, a paper Ferguson edited and of which Chudej was president. The witness said he did not know the source of the [illegible]. Asked by Senators if it was "butter and egg money," he said proceeds from such a source were not listed.

Chudej said he severed his relations with Ferguson August 19 after the Governor had refused to appoint him to a vacancy on the state board of control. Senator Martin asked:

"Isn't it a fact that you were sore because you did not get appointed and set out to slander the good name of some one?"

Chudel replied:

"It might be true that I was disappointed at not being named to the board of control but I did not set my head to get any one.

Senator Clint C. Small:

"You know as a matter of fact that Ferguson has been de facto governor of Texas since January, don't you?"

"I do not know who has been governor."

WIFE EXPLAINS 'CATTY' LIFE WITH RIVAL

Husband Stabs Brother For Protest Over Tangled Affair

International News Service.

DETROIT, Sept. 27.—A "trial love" arrangement, whereby a young wife permitted her husband to bring his "other woman" into their home on the theory that he would soon tire of her, had ended in near-tragedy today, with the husband in jail for stabbing his brother.

The victim, Joseph Case, 22, will recover.

He was stabbed when he protested against the state of affairs in the home of his brother, Lewis, 26. According to the latter's wife, Beulah, mother of two small children, the elder Case brought Sylvia Martin, 23, into their home with her permission. For a month the three lived under the same roof, the women engaging in occasional fits of jealousy, and Case vainly trying to choose between his wife and his sweetheart.

Mrs. Case said:

"It was just an experiment in love. Lewis said if he could only live with this girl for a month he'd get tired of her and we could start all over again. He wanted to get her an apartment, but he couldn't afford it. So I let him bring her here.

"It really wasn't so awful. Sylvia was rather nice. We did the house work together. Occasionally we said 'catty' things to each other, but we never quarreled when my husband was around. Once in a while when I saw them making love I was jealous, but if I raised a row it would only make matters worse—and spoil the experiment.

"There were times when I wanted to break away, but I couldn't go out in the street with my two babies. We were in a trap."

The Cases were married in Indianapolis and came to Detroit six years ago. The husband has been out of work for more than a year.

HUDSON RIVER BOAT CRASH PERILS 127

Passenger Vessel Collides With Freighter

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Four passengers of the Hudson River night line boat Rensselaer were injured and 127 endangered when a Swedish freighter, the Roxena, collided with the Albany-New York boat in a fog about 2 a. m. today. None was seriously hurt.

With water pouring into her hold from a large hole in her hull below the water line, the Rensselaer warped up to a stone barge. The passengers, some of them heavy-eyed with sleep, others hysterical, were unloaded. After the freight in the night boat had been shifted and the damaged section of the raised hull above the water, the vessel resumed her trip. The passengers were taken to New York from Poughkeepsie by train.

Ralph E. Lyons, of Highlands, who was on the dock at Highlands, said he heard whistles through the fog, which was so dense that he could not see the lights of Poughkeepsie, across the river. The collision occurred on the famous Poughkeepsie intercollegiate regatta course, within sight of the Hyde Park home of President Roosevelt. Lyons said:

"Suddenly I saw the lights of the Rensselaer gliding through the fog near the middle of the channel. An instant later there was a confusion of whistles, the sound of the Rensselaer's paddles being thrown into reverse, and I heard men calling.

"Then I heard the shock, and saw the lights stop moving. The noise continued, and I heard wood and steel being torn."

BEBE'S DEATH REPORT FAKE

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.—Ben Lyon and Bebe Daniels, who, over a period of years, have been the recipients of a series of strange communications, today were annoyed in a different manner.

Lyon's niece, Mrs. Clara Meyers, who resides in Baltimore, Md., has received a telegram from Los Angeles, reading:

"My wife killed in automobile accident today."

It was signed "Ben."

She immediately communicated with Lyon and found that neither he nor his wife had had an accident and that he had sent no such message.

Lyon today was endeavoring to learn through the telegraph company the identity of the sender.

Only a few days ago Mrs. Lyon received another fantastic letter from Albert F. Holland, who for years has been under the delusion that he was her husband. He twice has been committed to asylums. Holland is at liberty again.

SIREN OF FILMS QUITS MATE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.—A week of elopements today had been broken by a separation. Rita Leroy, well known as a portrayer of wicked women on the screen, has moved to the Warner-Kelton hotel leaving her husband, Ben Hershfield, to think things over.

Miss Leroy, although famous for her siren roles on the screen, has no such ideas in real life. She left a film company flat and walked home because a director wanted her to wear scanty attire in a picture, a costume that she considered indecent. She further emphasized her refusal to play the part in real life that she plays on the screen by slapping the heavy in her picture, who tried to make love to her when the camera wasn't grinding.

Miss Leroy and Mr. Hershfield—who is a well-known actor's agent—have quarreled before and kissed and made up. But their friends say this is a permanent separation which may end in the divorce court.

Shirt Grabbing Charged In $4,000,000 Triangle

Spicy Party Stories Enliven Love Theft Suit

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Before—"Home movies" to show the happy domestic life of Helen Vogel Stern and her husband, Allison L. S. Stern, millionaire broker and turfman.

After—A husband drinking liquor in quantities, permitting Ruth to pull out his shirttail on a fashionable dance floor, engaging in spicy petting parties, and finally leaving home altogether.

These aspects of a $4,000,000 love triangle were laid before Justice Hofstadter and a Supreme Court jury today by Max D. Steuer, counsel for Mrs. Stern in the latter's alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Ruth Erlanger Nathan, member of the famous theatrical family.

Steuer startled the crowded courtroom by accusing Mrs. Nathan and her family of plotting to have Mrs. Stern declared insane so that she would not be believed when she told of a certain scene in which she allegedly surprised her $4,000,000 husband with Mrs. Nathan.

Contentment reigned in the Stern home, said Steuer, until it was rudely shattered in 1926, when the Sterns, motoring home from a football game, stopped at an inn.

Soon afterward, "by arrangement or not," Mrs. Nathan and her husband, Alfred Nathan, Jr., since divorced, entered, declared Steuer. He said:

"Mrs. Nathan came over to the table and sat beside Allison Stern. She filled his glass with liquor to an extent greater than he had ever been seen to drink before.

"After a while Mrs. Nathan and Stern began to clown. Mrs. Nathan removed Stern's coat and vest. Subsequently, for amusement, though I won't pretend to say what amusement it afforded, she pulled his shirt out of his trousers."

Mrs. Nathan, a vivacious brunnette, seated at the front of the courtroom, leaned forward intently, her chin resting on her hand, as Mrs. Stern's case was set forth. She smiled at times, and occasionally shook her head.

Just behind her, looking almost as youthful as a college boy, sat Stern, the $4,000,000-husband. Mrs. Stern, a slender brunette with a forlorn expression, sat at the other side of the room.

WOMAN SLEUTH TRAPS FUGITIVE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—A woman's inclination for detective stories and her camera eye led today to the holding of Ben Jones, 34, in Los Angeles County Jail on suspicion of being a convicted murderer and a fugitive from a South Carolina prison camp.

Mrs. Isadore Gore, wife of a theater operator, scanning the pages of a detective magazine, saw a picture of a man named C. D. Cooper, listed as a fugitive from the prison camp. She recognized the picture as that of a man she knew as Ben Jones, business agent for a motion picture projectionists' union.

Mrs. Gore reported her suspicion to the Sheriff's office and Jones was arrested last night as he was kissing his young wife, Mrs. Irene Jones, before leaving the city for a few days.

The Sheriff's office said the man admitted his identity as a fugitive and told a story of torture, of flogging and days without food in the prison camp. He said he was innocent of the murder of which he was convicted in 1919.

INSANITY PLEA FOR NURSE

International News Service.

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Sept. 27.—Two pleas, "not guilty" and "not guilty by reason of insanity," will be entered by Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz, San Francisco nurse, accused of killing Frank J. M. Grace, retired shipping magnate, when she appears in Superior Court Friday.

This was announced today by John Duggan, Jr., Pittsburgh attorney, who arrived here to associate with Stanford G. Smith, former District Attorney, in Miss Weltz' defense.

The decision to add an insanity plea to defense plans was made after the two attorneys had a long conference with the former war nurse in her cell here.

Three physicians, employed by the prosecution, examined Miss Weltz last week and announced that she was sane.

Duggan declared that Miss Weltz had sufficiently recovered from a breakdown to give a brief outline of her reasons for the shooting. He said:

"After hearing her story I believe we can present what might be called a 'justifiable defense.'"

78 KNOWN DEAD IN HURRICANE

International News Service.

As rising waters again menaced the hurricane-wrecked city of Tampico, restoration of main communication lines today revealed widespread damage in areas to the south.

The state of Guerrero and the Isthmus of Tehuantepec suffered severely from the hurricane, reports disclosed. The military supervisor at Minatitlan, on the isthmus, sent an appeal for trains to rescue families, stating the waters of the Suchiate River were rising "gigantically."

Despite the rising of the flood waters from the Panuco and Tamesi rivers, relief workers continued their efforts to restore order. A checkup showed not a single home escaped damage, while 75 per cent were completely or partially destroyed.

The total death list was not known. Fifty-three bodies were recovered in Tampico and 25 in Cardenas, nearby, and no estimate of the loss of life in the other affected regions was available.

Prince and 'Pro' Beaten By Woman and Lord

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales and Archie Compston, his personal golf professional, today were defeated by Lord Castleross and Dorothy Pearson, runner-up for the British women's golf title in 1927, 4 and 3. Miss Pearson was given a handicap of nine strokes.

They played on the new course while the medal round of the Royal and Ancient Club's annual fall meeting was getting under way on the old. The Prince is competing in the meeting with Lord Castleross as his partner.

The Prince drove well throughout the round but was putting poorly in the early stages. Toward the end he was approaching nicely and getting down in regulation figures, having several fours on his card.

The heir to the British throne appeared fit as he went around the course hatless, dressed in a sporting jacket, plus fours, pale blue stockings and black shoes.

The Prince has not been so fortunate in his golfing duels with women. He was not playing directly against Miss Pearson today but in a similar foursome several weeks ago against Bea Gottlieb, little American golfer, they placed a side bet on their individual scores and the Prince bowed in defeat.

Another mysterious murder was added officially to Pittsburgh's long list of unsolved crimes today.

After hearing the meager evidence, a Coroner's jury found that Edward A. Sabel, 47, a carpenter, of 938 West North avenue, North Side, was murdered by person or persons unknown.

Th principal witness was the dead man's daughter, Alice, 8. She testified a well-dressed young man stood in the dark outside the back door of her home on the night of August 12 and asked to see her father. He was needed, the stranger told her, to repair a house damaged by an exploding still.

She called her father, she told Chief Deputy Coroner John S. Aldisert, and as he stepped into the darkness he was shot twice in the abdomen. She saw two dark shadows leap into a waiting car and speed away.

Homicide detectives testified Sabel was a man of excellent reputation, not connected with rackets in any way.

BISHOP FLAYS REPEAL TREND

READING, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's attitude toward beer and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment has come in for biting denunciation by Bishop Grant D. Batdorf, of Harrisburg, presiding officer of the East Pennsylvania Conference, United Brethren in Christ.

He told the conference yesterday that shortly after Mr. Roosevelt took the oath to uphold the Constitution, "he backed the bill for 3.2 beer and in so doing opened the way to violation of the document he swore to defend." He continued:

"President Roosevelt followed this up by using his lofty office as an instrument in pushing the movement for the repeal of the prohibition amendment".

Asserting he does not dispute the President's right to do as he did, Bishop Batdorf added "I deeply regret that he is employing his exalted station in the attempt to invalidate a great moral achievement."

REICH 'FIREBUG' SANE, 2 SAY

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A Swedish criminologist and a Dutch editor testified in the Reichstag arson trial today that when they visited Marinus Van Der Lubbe in jail they found the young Dutch defendant in a sound mental and physical condition.

The criminologist, Harry Soederman, and the editor, Johan Luger, were called following testimony that Van Der Lubbe was weak from a self-imposed fast and allegations that he had been mistreated. Soederman said:

"Van Der Lubbe laughed when I asked whether he was being mishandled."

The court commented:

"That testimony ought to repudiate alleged foreign reports that Van Der Lubbe is being slowly poisoned and whipped."

Four other men, the former Communist leader, Ernst Torgler, and three Bulgarian political refugees, are on trial for complicity in the burning of the German Reichstag Building last February.

Detectives to whom Van Der Lubbe allegedly confessed setting the Reichstag blaze and other Berlin fires also were called to the stand.

THOUSANDS HAVE COME TO HEAR "DEACON" LITZ'S THRILLING STORY

HE'S STILL HERE

DON'T MISS THIS OPPORTUNITY

Shake the "Steering" Hand of This Famous Race Driver | See the Demonstration of the New Blow-Out-Proof Tire

Since safety has become the prime requirement of the modern motor car owner when he buys tires, this demonstration of Pharis Roadgripper tires at Spear's downtown store is attracting immense throngs.

"Deacon" Litz, famous race driver, who established the A.A.A. world record for stock-tire speed and safety with Pharis tires in 1932 is, of course, the center of attraction.

Many who had never seen a racing car at close range were astonished at the diminutive size of his Litz-Miller Special—the famous car which has carried him to fame. It was this car, equipped with Pharis Roadgripper tires bought right out of a dealer's store by A.A.A. officials, that carried him at speeds up to 129 miles an hour in the test which gave Litz the A.A.A. crown for a pace never before officially made on tires other than specially-built racing tires.

Spear & Co. invite all who are interested in tires of proved safety at low cost to come in and meet "Deacon" Litz and ask him what he thinks of Pharis Roadgrippers.

ALMOST A Century of Progress

NEARING a Centennial of our own, Gimbels pauses to measure its progress. 1842 . . . Adam Gimbel, laying down his peddler's pack and establishing himself in a crossroads store at Vincennes, Indiana. 1933 . . . four great Gimbel Stores in four hub cities, employing 10,000 people and reaching one-fourth of the country's population. Great progress it has been, you'll agree.

So we're celebrating almost a century of progress with Gimbel Month in Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Philadelphia and New York.

Here in Pittsburgh we have more than $4,500,000 in merchandise . . . a full $1,800,000 worth in excess of our normal Gimbel Month requirements . . . bought because we couldn't afford not to buy it. This goods, for the most part, will bear price marks that you thought were gone forever. The story will resound throughout the Pittsburgh district.

At Gimbels in October you will get facts, not romance . . . you will get bargains, not conversation . . . you will get obvious savings in the standard quality goods you want.

BOY KILLS PAL IN 'HERO' SHOOTING

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Acquiescence in the imaginative scheme of Joseph Gregorovic, 19, by which Gregorovic was to become a hero, receive the spmyathy of family and friends and escape the censure of his family for borrowing $5 on a grocery account today had brought Louis Zelenka, 17, to a jail cell, charged with homicide.

Gregorovic, Zelenka told detectives, had borrowed $5 from the family grocer unknown to his parents and charged it to their account. Unable to repay it the youth, a member of the naval militia, worried but finally hit on a plan. Zelenka quoted him as saying:

"'You shoot me in the arm or stab me. It'll be a cinch. I'll tell them I was in a holdup and everyone will feel bad and they'll send me candy and flowers and make a fuss like they did when I was in the hospital last year. And they'll forget about the five bucks.'"

'I WAS SCARED'

Zelenka demurred. But his friend insisted. So they went to the roof of the apartment building where Zelenka lived, the latter armed with a .22 caliber rifle. The boy said:

"Joe stood up and stuck his arm out a little way. 'O. K., Louis, go ahead and shoot' he told me. I aimed at his arm but I guess I was scared and shaky and I fired. But instead of grabbing his arm Joe grabbed his chest.

"I said 'Gee, Joe, did I hit you there?'"

"But he said 'It's O. K. Louis. Go on downstairs and go to bed. I'll go to a hospital and tell 'em it was a holdup. It hurts but it's O. K.'"

Zelenka went to bed but he couldn't sleep, thinking of Joe on the roof top, clutching his chest. He went back to see how his friend was.

HELD FOR HOMICIDE

"I felt him and he was cold. I ran down and told my mother, but she sent me to school and said he couldn't be dead."

A neighbor, however, taking her dog to the roof for an airing, stumbled on Joe's body. Police were summoned and assembled residents of the building on the roof. Mrs. Zelenka saw the body and fainted. When revived, she told Louis' story.

Police took Louis into custody and booked him on a homicide charge. Mrs. Zelenka asked anxiously:

"You believe him, don't you?"

They told her:

"Yes, lady, we believe him, but we'll have to wait and see what the District Attorney thinks."

U. S. RAIL LOAN RATES LOW

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.) — An unusually attractive loan plan for purchase of steel rails is expected in informed circles to be offered to the railroads by the government in an effort to create additional employment.

This was made known in official circles following a White House announcement yesterday that government officials and steel mill executives had considered bids on some 500,000 to 700,000 tons of steel rails.

The money—about $25,000,000—would come from the public works fund allocated by Secretary Ickes, head of the public works administration.

The interest rate on the loans, it was said authoritatively, probably will range from 3 to 4 per cent, with the smaller figure the more likely. Railroads are paying 5 to 5½ per cent to the Reconstruction Corporation for financing loans and 4½ per cent for work loans.

MRS. MAX BAER TO ASK DIVORCE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Max Baer, the former Dorothy Dunbar, last night decided to take legal steps to obtain a divorce from her prize fighter husband. After consulting with her attorney, Wallace W. Davis, she made her decision to ask for an absolute divorce from the ex-Livermore butcher boy.

Mrs. Baer has not yet determined where the decree will be asked, but this complaint will be filed within the next 24 hours. The grounds upon which the suit will be based are in the process of preparation, and because of their nature great care and secrecy is being maintained both on the part of Mrs. Baer and her attorney.

Dorothy Dunbar, the widow of Tommy Wells, socially prominent in Minneapolis, astonished her friends when she married the fighter, who was then just starting his career. They were married July 8, 1931, in Reno after a whirlwind courtship.

Mrs. Baer also was once married to Jaime Garson y Barretto, of the Spanish legation, in London.

LEHMAN MEETS O'BRIEN ON N.Y. PAY CRISIS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Faced with default of municipal obligations, in immediate need of $25,000,000 for the Friday payroll, and outmaneuvered on their stock tax program by the New York Stock Exchange, city officials conferred again today with Gov. Herbert Lehman and bankers in search of a solution to a dire fiscal problem.

The city needs $25,000,000 to pay off its workers Friday and at least $72,000,000 to carry it through the November 1 payday.

From Gov. Lehman and Mayor John P. O'Brien it was learned that an agreement was expected from today's conference, and when representatives of the banking interests gathered at the Lehman residence indications were given that bankers would agree to a loan on assurances of municipal retrenchments and state aid.

Banking interests represented at the meeting included the most important financial houses of New York—J. P. Morgan & Co., the Chase National Bank, the New York Clearing House Association, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., First National Bank, Bankers' Trust Company and the Guaranty Trust Company.

The financial emergency harassing the Tammany administration was but part of the grief fallen the lot of the forces of John F. Curry, Tammany leader, and Mayor O'Brien.

Equally pressing is the political assault launched against Tammany, a fight to which has been added a Tammany arch foe and one-time conqueror—Samuel Seabury.

Seabury, whose investigation led to the resignation of Mayor James J. Walker, arrived from Europe last night refreshed and engaged to campaign for Fiorello H. La Guardia, fusion's mayoralty aspirant. Thus the city will see an anti-Tammany Democrat helping an independent Republican try to smash the regular Democratic machine.

Seabury did not comment on the fight between Mayor John P. O'Brien's administration and the stock exchange. That fight ended last night when O'Brien, reversing his position, vetoed two city bills that would have taxed stock transfers and the incomes of security dealers. The exchange thereupon dropped its plan to move to Newark, N. J.

Mrs. Pinchot Pins 'Wall St.' Label On Hoover

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Expressing approval of trade unions, Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, crusading wife of Pennsylvania's governor, says the best way for the unemployed to make known their needs to the state and federal government is through organization. She addressed the Unemployed Citizens League last night.

Praising the administration of President Roosevelt, she said:

J. V. THOMPSON, EX-COAL BARON, DIES AT 79

to Kentucky, where in 1832, Jasper Markle Thompson, father of J. V., was born. Left alone at the age of 3, Jasper was reared in the home of the Markles, his grandparents, in Fayette County. In 1850 Jasper bought a farm, served as internal revenue collector under President Lincoln, and was one of the organizers and first directors of the First National Bank. He became its president in 1870, and remained in that position until death in 1889.

JOSIAH'S CAREER BEGINS

Josiah V. was born February 15, 1854, and spent many of his early days around the bank. He was graduated from Washington and Jefferson College at 17, with a bachelor of science, degree and immediately began working in his father's bank. Promotions came and when the elder Thompson died, "J. V." ascended to the presidency.

From his father's estate he obtained approximately $100,000 which he used to found the president's chair at his alma mater.

Under the guidance of young Thompson the bank became one of the strongest in the country. Capitalized at $100,000, it was first on the honor roll of banks in the United States, with a capital and surplus of $1,700,000. In his dealings it is said he never exacted more than 6 per cent interest.

Just when he began branching out as a coal land speculator is not known, but he drew about him a large coterie of friends and business associates. At one time "Thompson and his 800 associates" was a common phrase in Uniontown.

OPERATIONS SPREAD

With these associates he dealt in coal lands, spreading his sphere of operations until he covered practically all of the coal mining sections of Western Pennsylvania and extending into West Virginia. His greatest holdings were in Greene County, with West Virginia second.

But while he dealt in coal lands, it is said, he refrained from industrials, although he was financially interested in some of the coke companies. It was said his father had lost money through an industrial investment and Thompson was wary of that line.

His mind took in the surrounding territory. The Connellsville coking coal field was well defined. In fact, farms on its edge were not held high in value. Thompson and his friends, about 1,900, bought up many farms, as the word went around that the coal was not suitable for coking. After much land had been taken over, Thompson electrified the coke industry by announcing that he had sold 2,000 acres to Henry Wick, Youngstown (O.) furnace and mill operator. The price stated in the deed was $1,100 an acre, an unheard of price. Later coking coal sold as high as $3,000. Much of the coal Thompson had sold had cost him as low as $16 an acre.

INVADES GREENE

He next moved over into Greene County, which save for a narrow guage line running from Washington to Waynesburg, the county seat, had no rail facilities. Thompson soon had the Greene County sheep raisers asking for a standard guage railroad to open their farms for coal. The line was finally built into Waynesburg from the Monongahela River, but long after Thompson had failed.

Thompson was rebuffed when he first attempted to peddle Greene County coal at $50 an acre, but some of these same interests later purchased the coal for as high as $500 an acre. Thompson had purchased some of that coal for $20 an acre. At one time it was estimated that Thompson and his associates held 200,000 acres of Greene County coal.

Thompson was an indefatigueable worker. While swinging coal land deals by day, he spent his nights in the banking offices, writing personal correspondence, but he was always on hand when the bank opened at 9 a. m. even though he had remained at his desk until 7 a. m. As a result of these irregular hours, he would immediately fall asleep when he boarded a train, his auto or trolley.

MANY ASSOCIATES

It was his custom when he had a large number of associates in his operations to prepare a sheet of paper as big as the top of his desk, with the names of his associates and the amount of their holdings. Having paid the taxes himself, he put down the pro rata share opposite each of the names. Often there were 200 names on the sheet.

Thompson had implicit faith in his bank employes. Once when an examiner called his attention to the fact that the employes were not bonded, he replied:

"I wouldn't have a clerk in my employ whose honesty had to be guaranteed by a bond."

And Thompson's faith in his clerks found a return in his own dealings. Frequently he swung big deals with farmers by merely signing his name, and often men passed over money to him on the street for deposit in the bank, without the entry in the bank pass book.

VAST HOLDINGS

Thompson delved deeper into the Greene County lands, and when the World War broke out he owned outright 141,413 acres of coal in Greene, Washington, Allegheny, Beaver, Armstrong and Fayette counties and in West Virginia. His holdings in Greene County were 58,402, and his West Virginia holdings, 72,103. He held only 733 acres of Fayette coal, but had surface holdings of 7,877 acres in his home county.

Thompson rode on high until the depression following the start of the World War, in 1914, hit this country. Early the following January his bank was closed by the Comptroller of the Currency, and then began a list of failures.

Hardly had Thompson gone into the hands of receivers, listing assets of $70,000,000 with liabilities of $22,000,000, then his associates began failing. Isaac W. Seamans was one of the first to go. He listed liabilities of $2,800,000 with assets of $3,500,000.

Then came the failure of F. H. Rosboro, William Hankins, Markle & Frank and Isaac Brownfield. These were followed by the crash of the Tower Hill Connellsville Coke Company, the Tower Hill Supply Company and the Palmer-Seamans Lumber Company.

BROTHER FAILS

Six days after Thompson crashed, his brother, W. M. Thompson, failed for half a million and reported assets of $1,250,000. Old Jasper Augustine came in the same day, listing liabilities of $102,000 with assets of $1,168,000. The Farmers and Merchants Bank of Mt. Morris was next to go. Then followed a long list of smaller associates.

In 1920 to provide funds to meet obligations Thompson's trustees sold all of the holdings to the Piedmont Coal Company for $5,500,000. Previous to this the trustees had disposed of about $2,000,000 worth of Thompson's property. At the time of the Piedmont deal, Thompson had left about 40,000 acres of coal in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

Through an agreement made with the Piedmont company, Thompson was permitted to retain possession of Oak Hill. The caretakers proved too great a luxury and the private swimming pool, conservatory, bowling alleys, stables and other accoutrements provided for the second Mrs. Thompson, who had been "Honey" Hawes, were abandoned. However, Thompson found peace and solitude in the mansion of 52 rooms.

DIRECTS COAL SALES

An agreement with the Piedmont company made Mr. Thompson sales manager and as a result hundreds of acres were disposed of at fancy prices.

At one time Mr. Thompson had title for virtually all of the site on which the Clairton bi-products plant and town is constructed.

Since his discharge from bankruptcy Mr. Thompson spent the greater part of his time in compilation of a biography of the Thompson family. More than $50,000 had been expended in this work, it was said. He had completed about 20 volumes of 100 sheets each.

Mr. Thompson gave Uniontown its first large structure, an 11-story office and apartment building.

He leaves two sons, Andrew A. and John R., both children of the first wife.

In recent years Thompson had been endeavoring to recoup his fortune. He has appeared many times in the courts, always making the same plea, that he had a big deal pending. His troubles multiplied and he became involved in lawsuits growing out of his management of the Messmore and Niccolls estates, of which he was executor.

SUED BY NIECE

The efforts of the Princess of Thurn and Taxis, niece of Thompson, to effect a settlement with him finally resulted in Thompson being committed to jail for contempt of court, in December, 1930. He was only in jail 10 days when he was released.

Thompson was thrice married. His first wife died. His second marriage ended in a divorce and a large financial settlement to the wife. The third marriage was to Mrs. Rose Stillwagon Mahoney, widow of a Pittsburgh scrap iron dealer, in New Cumberland, W. Va., in 1929.

Despite Thompson's vast wealth, he lived a comparatively secluded life in Uniontown. He loved his farm, but was never fond of social functions. Once he was boomed for Governor of Pennsylvania and spent money lavishly in taking delegates to an eastern convention.

His estate has been in the hands of the referee in bankruptcy for years. The referee in 1929 distributed a dividend of 2 cents on the dollar to the $18,000,000 worth of unsecured claims, making a total payment of 12 cents. At that time it was said that only a few thousand dollars was left. The Thompson bank, however, not only paid its depositors in full, when finally liquidated, but returned a sizeable dividend to its stockholders.

When Thompson was stricken with apoplexy and taken to the Uniontown Hospital, an institution to which he had contributed largely in his prosperous days, he insisted that he be returned to his home as he could not bear the expense of a private room.

Saegertown Man Named by Caucus

MEADVILLE, Pa., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Pitt Davis, Saegertown Democrat, will seek the disputed office of register and recorder of Crawford County at the November election. He was named at a caucus last night, and will oppose Ray F. Smock, selected by the Republicans last week.

SPEED PAYMENT FOR BOULEVARD COMPLETION

Disputed claims of approximately $20,000 for work on the Allegheny River boulevard by the John F. Casey Company are to be settled within 10 days so that the "Nadine Bungle" can be eliminated and the unfinished portion paved before the snow flies.

Auditors for Main & Co., in a report made public yesterday, told the County Commissioners the Casey company has $62,626.19 due, bringing the payments to date to $1,762,696.26.

The company is asking, in addition, about $20,000, which is in dispute, for moving a barbecue stand from the right of way, and resloping the hillsides at Brilliant Station.

It is expected a settlement will be expedited so the work at Nadine can start as soon as the Public Service Commission approves the agreement between the county, the Pennsylvania Water Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Casey company holds the contract for the entire boulevard. County officials, pointing out that the company's figures for the incompleted section are based on the high prices of a few years ago, are hopeful of an adjustment.

The auditors said that on the Shades Run Bridge, which is part of the boulevard, some of the expansion joints were not properly filled and slabs on the bridge roadway were not uniform.

On the west approach to the bridge, the auditors said, earth has settled, causing the curb to pull an inch or two from the road slabs.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

People Should Not Marry Because of Pity

Shall Della marry the boy friend because she's sorry for him, and "can't bear to make him suffer" by telling him she leaves another?

And if she does, will she be doing him the noble favor she thinks—

Or selling him out?

Get this earful from Della.

Dear Elsie Robinson:

I am in a terrible quandary. For two years I have been going with a really wonderful young man. For a year we have been engaged. I told him that I loved him, and really thought I did.

Now I know I made a mistake about my feelings. I have met another man, and I love him—I know that this is no mistake—and I know that he loves me. He has told me so. If I were free I would say "yes" to him right this minute.

But there is Roy. He has built the whole plan of his life around me. He is working and saving his money for our future. He is looking forward with great happiness to our marriage. He has even started to buy a house, and he talks and plans constantly for our future. Everything he does is for that one end—our life together.

Roy is a fine fellow. Everybody likes him. He is simply wonderful to me. He believes absolutely in my loyalty and love. He thinks I am the only girl in the world. I know it would ruin his life if I broke with him.

HESITATES TO DECIDE

I can't bear the thought of hurting him—yet I am so unhappy! I don't know what to do. Ted, the boy I have fallen in love with, is urging me to break with Roy and marry him. He has told me that I will be doing Roy an injustice if I marry him, when I am just sorry for him. But of course he is speaking for himself there, I know. So I can't bring myself to believe that what he says is true.

Will you please help me? I don't know what to do. Sometimes I think that I simply can't go on with things as they are. And then I think of Roy, and I am so sorry for him! I feel as if it were my duty to stick to him. I know just how terrible it will be for him if I tell him the way things are.

Please tell me—what shall I do? DELLA.

What shall you do?

Let me ask you one, Sissy. Would you want Roy to marry you, just because he was sorry for you? Wouldn't you be humiliated, outraged, if you loved him and married him and found out later that he didn't love you? Of course you would!

A GREAT WRONG

Well, there's your answer.

"But he'd never find out!" you cry. "I'd never let him know! I'd devote my life to making him happy!"

Yes? Maybe you think so. But you couldn't get away with it. You'd reveal your real feelings in a thousand unconscious actions. Love can't be faked. Life won't be starved without raising a rumpus. It wouldn't be long before you'd grow resentful of the bargain you'd made. You'd grow sour and irritable in spite of yourself. Then he'd begin to resent your attitude, and the rows would start.

So don't kid yourself, youngster, that you'd be doing any man a favor to "sacrifice yourself" for him. You'd be doing him a great big wrong.

Tell him the truth. It will hurt him, of course; but it won't hurt him half so much as you'll hurt him if you marry him just because you "don't want to hurt his feelings."

Is that good advice, Stranger? What do you think? Would you marry anyone—or expect anyone to marry you—for pity?

Fay King Views Beauties as Each the Loveliest of Her Kind

By FAY KING.

There never has been unanimous approval of any one beauty. There never can be.

The perfect of any type is beauty, yet cannot be said to surpass all other types.

Beauties are like flowers, each loveliest of her kind, but your favorite will outshine them all—for you.

Invariably when beauty contestants are shown in the news real, comment is always that some of the losers are lovelier than the winner. And so they are to those who think so.

Emma Hamilton, whose beauty is forever immortalized in the magnificent paintings Romney made of her, was not considered beautiful by other contemporary painters. They would not engage her as a model.

Would that every beauty had another Romney to capture her charms forever!

Madge Seeks a Way to Protect Avis

As Hugh finished his recital of the astounding message Avis Arlen had sent to me, he chuckled with a patent amusement that I echoed.

"Yes, I agree with you. Yet that ferret-faced man did not look as if he would be very impressionable."

"He's at least a 20-minute egg," Hugh agreed, "and in all probability Philip Veritzen will have received a full report of your meeting with Miss Arlen within a half hour of the train's arrival in New York. Then he will try immediately to get in touch with Miss Arlen and with you, with the idea of putting the element of surprise into his questioning of you both. What are you going to tell him?"

"I don't know," I said miserably. "I can't think of a thing."

"Of course, you can refuse to talk to him until after you have talked with her; but don't you think that will make him even more suspicious of both of you? And, though I think the young woman capable of any sort of deception, I have very little respect for her brain cells.

VAGUE RESENTMENT

"If I may presume to advise you, I should say that you ought to prepare her alibi for her, which is no more than many more or less distinguished attorneys do for their clients every day, and that you should try to get her on the telephone the minute you reach home, and tell her exactly what she must say. At the rate we are going," he chuckled, good-humoredly, "we shall be at your home long before she arrives in New York."

I flushed at his raillery, and involuntarily slowed my driving pace. He gave a little chagrined exclamation and put his hand for just an instant over mine as it rested upon the wheel.

"Please!" he said, "don't take that seriously. You were not driving recklessly. Look at this road, like an ice rink, and but one or two cars in sight! And you are the most skillful woman driver I know. So please step on the gas again. Or would you prefer that I drive?"

I do not count myself a feminist, but something perverse rose in me at the encomium on my driving. It was so very patent that he considered any mediocre masculine driver to be superior to the most skillful woman who ever laid hands upon a wheel, that I felt a sudden unwillingness to surrender the wheel to him.

If he had not said just that, I should have moved over promptly and yielded the wheel to him. But as it was, I felt stealing over me the vague resentment which Hugh's attitude toward the mentality and ability of women in general always gives me. He is a reactionary, I have found, compared with whom Dicky is a radical, nay a violent "red."

This fresh proof of Hugh's attitude made me not only hold on to the wheel, but gave a fillip to my driving. I "stepped on the gas" with verve and decision, even as I said:

"Thank you, but I'm too indolent to change seats. And I love to drive on these roads. Perhaps I shall be able to think better while I am driving."

"One can detach one's mental machinery profitably," he said. But I noticed with quiet malice that he leaned forward, snatched a quick glance at the speedometer, and then settled into the watchful attitude characteristic of a man sitting with a woman driver who is exceeding the speed limit.

ANOTHER PROBLEM

"I am ready for anything," that attitude said as plainly as words, "but praying that it won't happen."

For several minutes we rode along without speaking. Then I voiced the horn of the dilemma that was uppermost in my mind.

"If I do hit upon a plausible explanation of our interview, I do not know how I am going to talk to her. I cannot telephone her from the house. My mother-in-law already is so upset over Mr. Veritzen's unexplained silence that we dare not mention his name. That was the reason I did not call him from our own home. If she should overhear me talking to Miss Arlen, she would be sure to suspect all sorts of things. She loathes the girl anyway. So—"

"So," Hugh interrupted me, distinct amusement in his voice, "I gather that you do not wish to telephone Miss Arlen from the farm. But will you kindly tell me what is the matter with The Larches?"

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

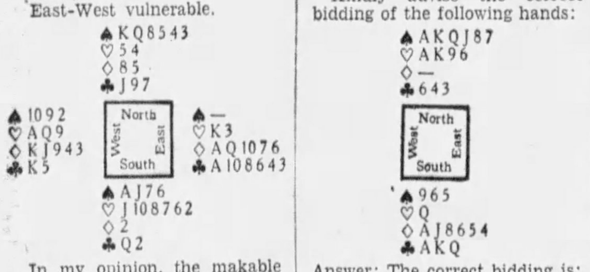
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Distributional Bidding

Games dependent upon playing-tricks, and not necessarily great strength in honor-tricks, are easy enough to bid because of the safeguard of the minimum honor-tricks necessary to provide the necessary entries and stoppers. Playing-tricks are just as good tricks as others. However, when it becomes a question of a Grand Slam or Small Slam contract there enters the necessity of first round control of at least three suits if the contract is to take 12 tricks, and first round control of all four suits if it is a contract to take 13.

Mr. T. W. Parkin, of Redding, Cal., in a recent letter, submits the hand below, played in a rubber game in which not even a Small Slam was reached, although, as the cards lie, it plays for a Grand Slam with tricks to spare. He is anxious to know wherein the East and West partnership went astray in their bidding. The hand:

West, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.



In my opinion, the makable Grand Slam can be bid provided North overcalls, as he did, with his six-card spade suit. It is, perhaps, a sad fate to have a bid designed as a defensive measure increase your opponents' gains, but then, this happens only occasionally, and we must take the bitter with the sweet. I think the bidding should go:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♠ (1)	3 ♠ (2)
Pass (3)	Pass	4 ♣ (4)	Pass
5 ♣ (5)	Pass	6 ◇ (6)	Pass
7 ◇ (7)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—With magnificent support for partner's bid suit, game appears certain and Slam a possibility.

2—South attempts to interfere with the exchange of information.

3—West is really relieved not to be required to bid, and therefore embraces the opportunity to turn the responsibility back to his partner.

4—Fully prepared to bid game in diamonds, but desiring to disclose also his biddable club suit.

5—West here has no alternative. His diamond suit is not rebiddable, although he can infer from East's bidding strong support for it.

6—On the previous bidding East can place, by inference, at least the heart Ace in the West hand. The contract of six should not be dangerous.

7—West feels sure, on his partner's strong bidding, that he holds both the diamond Ace and the club Ace; otherwise he would offer him an alternative contract at the Small Slam level. The bid of seven may require a nice drawing of inferences, but the chances certainly favor its fulfillment.

It will be noted that the hand is made laid down.

Today's Question

Kindly advise the correct bidding of the following hands:

Answer: The correct bidding is:

North	South
1 ♠	3 ◇
3 ♠	4 ◇
4 ♡	4 ♠
4 NT	5 NT
7 ♠	Pass

South's three-diamond bid is justified on account of his diamond length and the extra values of the two Queens and the Knave over 3 honor-tricks. There is no need for North to bid more than three spades in response and his four-heart bid over four diamonds is extremely strong. South's four-spade bid affirms secondary support in that suit so that all that Declarer need know is whether or not his partner holds two Aces. He bids four notrump to find this out, and upon receiving the response of five notrump can go straight to seven.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Brain Fatigue Is Often a Cause of the "Blues"

I have been thinking about life. I have been asking myself why it is that so many persons are discontented and much of the time in the dumps?

Sometimes there may be ill-health. Is the ill-health the cause of the mental state, or is it the other way round?

Dr. Copeland

But not all the unhappy ones are physically sick. Many of them appear perfectly well and, on careful medical examination, are found normal. Then why are they not cheerful and content?

I wonder if it isn't a fact that too many of the human family are mentally tired? Perhaps they suffer from what may be called "brain fatigue."

Of course, the brain substance is a part of the body. It depends on the heart and stomach, on the digestion, circulation, and supply of nerve energy, in common with the rest of the body.

But one may be perfectly normal in every part and yet have his legs give out if he runs too fast or too far. His heart may rebel if he moves too energetically.

It is exactly that way with the mind. If it is taxed too strenuously, if it is kept at work for many more than sensible hours, of course it gets tired.

What are the symptoms of a tired mind? Among these are peevishness, irritability, moroseness, readiness to show anger, unreasonableness, despair, tears, perhaps.

It is not a good thing to have too many irons in the fire. "Change of work is play," it is said, but I have come to believe there is something wrong with that philosophy. While I firmly believe everybody should have an avocation, a hobby, to which he can turn for relief, yet I am convinced that many naturally capable persons are attempting to do too many tasks, to keep too many irons hot.

There is a temptation for mentally alert persons to become deeply interested in a variety of undertakings. They should be reminded of the old saying that "the jack of all trades is master of none." It is impossible to do well all the tasks to which one could set himself and really wish to do.

Contentment of mind will surely come to that sane and sensible person who sets the limits upon his undertakings. He must choose his chief task and relentlessly deny himself access to others.

To follow that program is the surest path to success, and better than that, it makes possible gleeful entrance into the natural pleasures that should be a part of every really full life.

Another saying is that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Without reasonable indulgence in recreation, nobody can be otherwise than dull and stupid, to say nothing of having to be endured in spite of his ill temper.

To have cheerfulness, good nature and a smiling countenance, there must be indulgence in some degree of frivolity. There will be no stomach for this if the mind is worn to a frazzle in vain attempt to carry on a half dozen serious undertakings. As I see it, the natural pleasures must be indulged if there is to be contentment of mind.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Fall Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help me with plans for a fall wedding in the country?

1—The couple are middle age. The yard this year will not do for an outdoor affair. The house is quite large and a trifle more formal than most country homes. We thought of just inviting the relatives—about 40 in all. Should the bride have attendants? If so, how many?

2—She does not plan to wear a veil. How elaborate should her dress be, also the bridesmaids' dresses? She has one sister and a very dear friend she would like to have in the wedding party, also a little niece, if it is not improper to have a flower girl.

3—Should hats and gloves be worn?

4—Would a buffet supper be proper? B.

1—The bride need not have attendants if she does not wish to. But usually there is one attendant, a maid of honor or a matron of honor. I can well understand that she would like to have her sister as an attendant, and that sister would be the maid of honor, or, if she is married, she would be called the matron of honor. The friend might also be included in the wedding party, as a bridesmaid. It would be proper to have a flower girl.

2—It would be the best form for the bride to wear an afternoon dress of a simple but rather formal type, and for the bridesmaids to wear costumes that are harmonious with this attire.

3—Hats add an excellent detail of harmony, and I think that, for this occasion, the bride and her attendants should wear them. Gloves need not be worn.

4—Yes, this is the customary kind of service.

The Class Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please inform me on which finger it is correct to wear a class ring? I maintain that it is worn on the third finger of the left hand, and is removed only by the engagement ring. My friend says it is to be worn on the same finger of the right hand, and is never removed, unless by choice. Who is correct? D.

There is no definite rule about the finger on which the class ring is to be worn. This is usually voted on in class meeting, so that the correct measurements may be taken for the rings. It is very often the custom to wear the class ring on the small finger of the right hand, but if this is not the finger chosen by the majority of the members of the class, then any other finger may be chosen.

Medal, Cash Award for Diction

There'll be a great deal of speculation, now, as to who will win the Pittsburgh radio announcer's medal and $150 award for (1) clear articulation and ease of delivery; (2) correct pronunciation; (3) pleasing tone quality; (4) freedom from disagreeable localisms.

There should be a medal awarded to the studio management that allows an announcer to be natural, instead of requiring him to imitate a circus barker. There's more flies caught with sugar.

The medal, a memorial to H. P. Davis, radio pioneer, and the cash prize will be awarded by a board of judges headed by Miss Maud A. Miner, diction teacher of the Microphone Playhouse.

The board, already assigned to eaves drop on all announcers employed by the five local stations, is composed of Dr. W. M. Parrish, University of Pittsburgh; Dr. Clinton E. Lloyd, Duquesne University; Helen Keil, Pennsylvania College for Women; Chester B Story, Schenley High School; Miss M. A. Graham Mitchell, Winchester School; Ernest Lunt, Mendelssohn Choir director, and Miss Miner.

Perhaps I'm a bit over-exercised about it, but I've counted 10, and still think it was a mistake for a Congressman to use his NRA time on the Columbia network Monday night to besmirch the opposing political faction.

A little more of that sort of thing, and the administrators of the recovery act will have lost one of its most powerful weapons for the war against depression.

If I'm an average citizen, then a great many others resented, as I did, the use of an NRA program to indulge in a post mortem in a tirade against the other political party.

* * *

That new announcer you hear on WJAS nightly is F. Beckley Smath. He comes to WJAS from WOBU, Charleston, and WSAZ, Huntington, W. Va.

* * *

I'm often reminded, when some of the local stations put on a musical program, of a visit to a foreign country, where the tunes the orchestras played, new to the natives, were popular in the states years before.

Name me certain studio programs and I'll name you, sight unseen, some of the numbers. For example: "Glow Worm," "Tip Toe Through the Tulips." The orchestras have to play and the singers have to sing whatever the studio music libraries furnish.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Here is complete vindication. Mrs. David McDonald, Turtle Creek, hasn't made doughnuts for years because the grease soaked in and the children rebelled at the taste and texture. She read the column the other day and tried making them again, using vinegar in the lard. The result—Doughnuts vanished completely shortly after the first bite.

So I am back giving advice once more in kitchen lore.

Mrs. McDonald also suggests that you add water to the leaves that remain in your tea pot then use the water on your plants. It makes them bloom beautifully. Try it on one plant first.

PAROLED YEAR IN AUTO DEATH

John A. Adams, 42, of 318 East Third avenue, Homestead, was on parole for a year today, following his plea of guilty to involuntary manslaughter before Judge Sylvester J. Snee.

He was accused in connection with the death of Thomas Joyce, 34, Homestead motorcycle policeman, who was a passenger in Adams' car when it collided with another on the Lincoln highway at Imperial, May 24.

Adams testified the collision resulted when he swerved to avoid hitting a third car which stopped suddenly ahead. His car struck that of the Rev. Thomas R. Allston, of Omaha, Neb., who suffered broken legs.

M'CLURE TRIAL POSTPONED

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—The trial of State Senator John J. McClure, Delaware County Republican leader, and 89 of the 95 persons indicted with him in a liquor conspiracy, scheduled to begin today was postponed by Federal Judge George A. Welsh until the Circuit Court decides appeals from his ruling refusing to quash the indictments.

The Circuit Court yesterday ordered opposing counsel to file briefs and fixed Monday, October 2, as the date for a decision.

CROWD AWAITS VISIT FROM 'BUTTONS'

The popularity of "Buttons," the Sun-Telegraph Page Boy, is emphasized by one call in particular he made yesterday. The woman to whom he was to deliver an award had seen her name on the Want Ad Page of the Sun-Telegraph and she was waiting for him. So was her entire family and four o. five of her neighbors. The woman remarked as the crowd gathered around "Buttons."

"Buttons"

"This is an event of my life because it's the first time in many months that I have had real money handed to me as a present."

Yet this is the daily mission of "Buttons." He is making the rounds of Pittsburgh in his nifty page boy uniform and wherever he makes a call he leaves a present of cash to boost the "Spend a Dollar—Make a Job—Buy in September and Save" campaign.

The names of the persons on whom he calls are "paged" in the Sun-Telegraph. Eleven names are selected every day for award. One of these 11 gets a present of $5.00—the other 10 each get $1.00.

If your name appears on the Want Ad page of the Sun-Telegraph "Buttons" is going to ring your doorbell and politely hand you some money. You can tell whether or not he is going to call on you by watching for your name in the Sun-Telegraph. It may be there today. It may appear tomorrow or the next day.

FRICK STRIKERS TO MARCH ON MILLS HERE

march in the next demonstration, their leaders say, and already the work of organizing the movement is under way.

Group leaders from various sections of the Western Pennsylvania bituminous field were conferring secretly today. Emissaries from this region were sent into United Mine Workers of America districts 3 and 5 to talk to leaders there and make definite plans.

A spokesman for the miners said:

"Yesterday's march came from only two locals in the region. There was no organized attempt to stage a demonstration, but the next time there will be. Every time in the district will send a delegation."

As evidence of their ability to mass delegations at any concentration point they wish, leaders pointed to the mass demonstrations at the Frick-owned Edenborn and Colonial mines. Covert attempts have been made at both operations to put men to work since the holiday began, despite the Frick company's oft repeated public announcements of "no work today."

Watchful pickets at Colonial No. 4 have reported several times that non-union workers have slipped past them into the shaft. It was feared that larger groups would attempt to enter Colonial mines Nos. 1 and 3 this morning.

PICKETS MASSED

Word spread through the region last night. Twenty-four-hour picket lines kept the vigil. A call for more pickets went up and by dawn there were groups pouring into the region from as far away as Pricedale in Westmoreland County and a number of Pittsburgh Coal Company mines in Allegheny County.

Washington and Greene County volunteers flocked to Edenborn mine, close to the river boundary separating Fayette and Greene counties.

At Edenborn, union men declare, the Frick company has mobilized a force of Alabama Negroes to break the holiday movement.

The company denies this.

An attempt to resume operations today at the Lowber Gas Coal Company mine at Gillespie where 500 men are observing the holiday failed despite the efforts of the local union president.

A delegation of pickets from the Lilly mine of the Valley Camp Coal Company, located in District No. 5 in Washington County, joined the mass demonstration at Colonial No. 3 this morning.

New Picket Invasion Balked at Clairton

A truckload of "holidaying" miners, attempting to picket the Carnegie Steel Company works at Clairton, were routed by Clairton police at 7 a. m. this morning. After parking for an hour at the West Elizabeth bridge-head, where an invading "army" was halted yesterday, they disappeared up the river road toward Monongahela.

Twenty-five deputy sheriffs were rushed to the spot, and are standing guard, tipped off, they say, that a repetition of yesterday's invasion is scheduled for today.

Several hundred men were ready to enter the No. 3 mine of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation at Coverdale when pickets intervened. The pickets were largely from Montour No. 10 of the Pittsburgh Coal Company at Library.

All major operations continued closed in this district. Patrick T. Fagan, president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, is trying to induce the men to go back to work by October 2, when the coal code takes effect, his efforts seemingly blocked by the determination of the miners not to go back "until Frick signs the code."

State police at Butler today received a telephone message that 500 miners were marching to Jegerson County to picket the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad mines at Adrian, near Punxsutawney.

body would be killed and attached his fingerprint to prove the authenticity of his letter, is surprised in his sleep by detectives and surrenders as peacefully as any white mouse.

A machine gun desperado, separated from his machine gun, loses much of his desperado character.

MRS. GARELICK, who has flowers and vegetables in her back yard in the Bronx, New York, says:

"There may be thousands of dollars worth of gold under my flowers and vegetables."

The late Senator George Hearst, of California, successful miner, whose enterprises included Homestake and Anaconda, asked by young Harvard boys how they could tell if they found gold in the mountains, replied:

"If you THINK it's gold, it's pyrites, not gold. If it is gold, you won't have to think, you'll know it."

70,000 MINERS JOIN HOLIDAY

the first time today, halted operations at three widely-separated Somerset tipples employing 1,300 men, and then converged on Windber, on the county line, and induced 1,400 miners of the Berwind-White Coal Company to lay down their picks.

A mass meeting was held in Windber this morning in an effort to bring out the rest of the 6,000 miners at Windber, the largest mining center in the field.

In Jefferson County only the Kramer mine of the Northwestern Mining Exchange was operating among the larger tipples. The holiday also was extended into Butler County, where 450 men at three mines struck.

INDIANA CLOSED

Every large operation in Indiana County was closed.

One mine in Elk County was idle although operations continued at other plants. Clearfield County tipples remained in production, the only field yet untouched.

The holiday has been 100 per cent effective in Fayette County for a week. No large mines are working in Westmoreland, Greene, Washington or Allegheny counties.

Phillip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, admitted that more than 70,000 miners had joined the holiday, tying up between 400 and 500 mines and wiping out a daily payroll of approximately $245,000. Murray said this represented more than 90 per cent of the present employment in Western Pennsylvania mines.

Mine union leaders, headed by Murray and Patrick Fagan, of Pittsburgh, continued today to hold endless conferences with local union leaders and operators, waging a grim, determined fight to get the men back at work by next Monday, when the coal code becomes effective, or before. Neither Murray nor Fagan would comment on the progress of their conferences.

WEIRTON STEEL WORKERS OUT

ing department, according to police, pulled men from automobiles who were attempting to enter the plant last night, and beat them.

The walkout is said to have been precipitated by demotions in the tin mill. Union leaders assert members of the Amalgamated Association were discriminated against.

A mass meeting was called for late today to plan the future course of the "holiday."

'MYSTERY,' SAYS WEIR

What the strike of Weirton workers of the National Steel Corporation is all about remained a "mystery" today to President E. T. Weir, of the corporation.

Weir said the workers in his mill had never contacted the company with their demands and he didn't know what the strike is all about. Said Weir:

"It developed in a small department in the tin mill Sunday night, and Monday night more walked out. You know how strikes progress.

"We're members of the NRA sode—we haven't violated its provisions."

"We will not bring men in to keep the mill open, but we'll operate just as long as men down there want to work. What business we have, of course, will go right away to our competitors.

"No, sir, we will not contract them. If they ever want to work again and they get tired of loafing, I guess they'll come around to see us.

"I think it's just the general atmosphere in the air—the men don't know what the hell it's all about and I'm sure we don't, either."

Meanwhile, M. F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, announced his two vice presidents—Edward Miller, executive officer of the sheet and tin division, and Thomas G. Gillis, executive of the bar iron division—have left for the strike scene.

Of the Amalgamated, Weir said:

"I don't know anything about that crowd."

LABOR PREDICTS LICENSING OF INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Organized labor's official analysis of the Recovery Act began today with a recommendation to one department of the American Federation of Labor for study of a federal licensing system applicable to all business and industry.

That recommendation was embodied in a report submitted to the metal trades department of the federation by John Frey, secretary-treasurer. Even while he was making that suggestion, the building trades branch of the federation made ready to start its convention nearby.

When they get through, their conclusions and proposals will be presented to the general federation convention which will start next week and last until its business is finished.

UNIFICATION AIM

William Green, president of the federation, and other officials are hopeful the convention next week and the preparatory meetings this week will bring a greater unification of labor to take advantage of its opportunities under the Recovery Act. As Frey put it in his report to the metal trades:

"The recovery act and the National Recovery Administration constitute a beginning rather than an end. They indicate a definite turn in the road over which business men have been traveling since our American industries had their origin. A federal regulation has been established which placed definite curbs upon the vaunted rugged individualism of the industry, which, in practice, had too frequently degenerated into ruthless exploitation."

Conceding that possibly the time was not ripe now for federal licensing and supervision of business, Frey recommended nevertheless that the metal trades department submit the question to the federation convention next week.

ASKS SHORTER WEEK

A 40-hour week, generally, is too long to take up the slack in unemployment, Frey said, advocating energetic efforts to reduce the maximums specified in NRA codes. He proposed closer co-operation between the various unions and added:

"The NRA has given a promise to labor never before afforded by legislation. But this promise, this guarantee, like the rights of men to liberty, will be of little value unless wage earners are taught to make practical use of it."

The millions of workers in building trades were advised today by Solomon Barkin of the NRA labor advisory board to insist upon a 30-hour week.

Addressing the convention of the building trades department of the Federation, he suggested that labor form definite policies at its meeting now beginning here and added:

"A 30-hour week is imperative if a direct attack is to be made on unemployment. Only 31 out of every 100 (building trades) workers are employed and of these only half are engaged full time.

"The 30-hour week is short enough to make significant impression on the unemployment situation and long enough to provide a basic income."

STATE POLICE ALL ON DUTY

HARRISBURG, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—With labor troubles in the anthracite and bituminous regions and a subsiding riot at the Eastern Penitentiary, all available state police were on special duty today.

Reports of quiet on all fronts, however, reached Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police.

Maj. Adams said the quelling of last night's disturbance at the Eastern Penitentiary made it possible to withdraw today all but 10 or 12 of the 30 troopers dispatched from Reading.

Picture Hits Marriage Plans

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 27.—The same picture which almost carried Jean Harlow's bridegroom away to Mexico now menaces the honeymoon that Hollywood confidently expects Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller to take as soon as he gets his final decree of divorce from Bobbe Arnst on October 11.

Unless plans are changed, Lupe will have to be in Mexico City with the "Viva Villa" troupe on the date that Johnny is legally free to marry her. Nor is there much hope that Louis B. Mayer will intervene, as he did by taking Hal Rosson off the camera of the Villa picture.

Of course, neither Lupe nor Johnny will admit that they plan to take any immediate matrimonial plunge. The swimming champ told me:

Miss Velez

I have every intention of marrying Lupe, if she is willing, but we don't know the date, and had rather not talk about it until my divorce is final.

In any event, there can be no extended honeymoon, for Lupe has picture assignments and Johnny will be working on the new "Tarzan" film for weeks to come.

Pomp and ceremony are Will Rogers' pet target. The comedian proved it again the other day when he was invited aboard a warship to enjoy a new flying thrill—being in a Navy plane as it is catapulted out over the water.

The Navy made it a big day for Will. The admiral was present with his staff, and the deck was lined with rows of sailors standing at rigid attention with arms stiffened in salute.

Will eyed the sailor boys for a moment, then walked over to them. Suddenly, he grinned.

"Won't anybody speak to you?" he asked.

Has anybody reported that Junior Laemmle gave Eleanor Holm some handsome silver service for a wedding present? . . . Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Dinner at Eight," photoplay version of the Kaufman-Ferber play that will come to the Nixon next Monday night, is the first picture of a former Pittsburgh boy, David O. Selznick, following his recent affiliation with M-G-M. This young executive has a number of artistic productions to his credit, including "Topaze" and "Christopher Strong." The photoplay has among its actors that popular character team, Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery, but they are not domestic partners in this one, in which Jean Harlow is the wife of Wallie, who, for a change, is rich in this picture. John Barrymore is a "hasbeen" movie actor, while Lionel is a shipbuilder who finds his business crashing about his ears. Lee Tracy is a snappy Broadway theatrical agent. Edmund Lowe is seen as a young doctor catering to the whims of love-lorn society women, and other prominent roles are filled by Billie Burke, Madge Evans, Jean Hersholt, Karen Morley, Louise Closser Hale, Phillips Holmes and May Robson. The seat sale will open tomorrow.

Frank Richardson, who sang in "Sunny Side Up," "Let's Go Places," and many other Hollywood films, will be in the Pitt when that playhouse opens Friday with a bill of vaudeville and a feature film. Also the great Noel Lester, billed as Ten Tons of Thrills, and Hal Skelly's Sisters, Monica and Ann. The film will be "Dance, Girl, Dance," with Alan Dinehart and Evelyn Knapp.

Mary Rogers to Study Before Acting

Contrary to some news reports, Will Rogers is not banning his daughter Mary from pictures. He plans to send her to New York to join a stock company, take dramatic and voice lessons and then have her make a real attempt in films.

Miss America Feature At the Summit

Miss America of the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant will be featured in the floor show at The Summit, near Uniontown, tonight and Thursday night. She will be seen in a skit, including a song, dance and modelling. Appearing with her will be Earl White, radio singer.

All in a Day

Passing of a Great Figure

IT IS very possible that you never heard the name of Sime Silverman, who died in Los Angeles the other night. Although he was the editor and publisher of Variety, the great theatrical trade journal, Sime very rarely publicized himself. He loved his publication with a proud intensity, and he devoted his life to its success. But he remained always in the background.

Yes, if you are not actively engaged in show business, it is hardly likely that you are familiar with the man or his history. And yet, regardless of where you live, you have seen evidences of his handiwork in connection with things theatrical. For Sime Silverman, willingly or unwillingly, was the most influential man in all show business.

He was influential, not alone as an editor, but as an adviser. Through the years, although I doubt if many Broadwayites recognize the fact, this man was a sort of father confessor to us all. He was true, he was always ready to listen, he was honest—and his advice was sound and practical. In trouble, your biggest stars always turned to him instinctively.

"I'm going to drop over and see Sime about it," was a statement I heard day after day, and year after year. Having a little contract trouble? See Sime about it. You don't know which manager would be best for you? Just ask Sime's advice. Go to the coast, or stay on Broadway? Just drop over and get Sime's opinion.

And Sime Silverman sat at his desk, and listened to them all. They came in an endless appeared, and there were many times when Sime must have grown very weary. But he never showed it. Whether it was Al Jolson or Jimmy Durante about a contract, or just a struggling hoofer who wanted to know why his sweetie no longer loved him, Sime always listened and advised to the best of his ability. His patience was as strong as his soul was sweet.

To me, the man was something of a god. When I was just a punk in the business he did his best to give me a lift. When I graduated from a punk to a mug he was still there with the encouragement.

When I covered Broadway for news stories, he gave me beats from Variety before they appeared in his own sheet. When I needed information that had to be absolutely correct, I called him personally, and he never failed me. Once, in years gone by, when I wanted to borrow $100 from a loan company and I asked him to sign my note, he tore up the note and handed me double the amount himself.

And was I the only one? Ah, my friends, if you only knew. I am but one of hundreds and hundreds whom he treated with the same kindliness and understanding. I am but one of very many who must remain eternally in his debt. I am but one of a sometimes unappreciative crowd to whom this man gave everything — and would take nothing in return.

"I'm going to drop over and see Sime about it." How many of us will wish, in the years to come, that we could use that line. How very, very many!...

Of slightly more than average height, Sime was a remarkably strong figure until his illness set in some two years ago. He talked slowly, sometimes almost drawling his words, and he never moved in undue haste. He acted rapidly only when it came to picking up checks, and then he moved with a speed that was almost uncanny.

To my knowledge, he never permitted anyone to pay for a meal or a drink while in his company. He tipped lavishly, but never with any display. And the waiters and the captains never considered him a sucker. They knew better. Sime simply loved to spend, and it was his humble opinion that, so long as he was getting a break, the other guy deserved one, too.

About his charities I will not go into detail. Sufficient to relate that he never turned anyone down at any time or under any circumstances. Naturally there were many who took advantage of his generosity, but Sime didn't seem to care much. When a friend rebuked him for being too liberal with a panhandler, Sime always had the same answer.

"If he has to ask for it," he would say, "he must be worse off than I am."

You are not to gather from this, however, that the man was not a fighter. When his cause was just and he felt that he was right, Sime was a powerful and devastating enemy. He could be as stern and uncompromising as any man who ever lived, and his battles with the Shubert Brothers and the B. F. Keith interests remain as mute testimony to the fact that the man always finished what he once began.

Yes, the man was a fighter all his life. Back around 1905, when Sime was fired from the Morning Telegraph for panning a vaudeville act in which the boss was interested, he started fighting in earnest. He founded Variety on some $1,500 in borrowed money, and Sime began to say what he pleased about show business.

The going was tough for plenty of years. There was more money to be borrowed, and debts to be paid. But the paper kept coming out, and Sime kept saying what he pleased. He fought that battle until he won it and Variety prospered mightily. And until his death the other night he was still fighting other battles for any cause in show business that he considered right and just and square.

You will have noticed, perhaps, that this is not a sob obituary about the man. I have purposely omitted anything along those lines because I know that Sime, himself, wouldn't have wanted it.

But there is one thing that I must add to this feeble effort of a portrait. I have before me now a letter that Sime sent me only a short time ago. I received it just as I left the hospital, so it must have been one of the last letters that Sime Silverman ever wrote. Read it:

"Dear Mark: Of course I wanted to drop down to see you, but I decided not to.

"Glad to hear you are all right with your tough break, and I hope you will soon be uptown where you can drop in.

"I'm apt to go into plenty of coughing at any minute, and I don't think that's so hot to do in front of anybody on a hospital cot. Which is the simple reason why I am staying away.

"With best—Sime."

That letter gives you a better insight of the man's character than I could possibly turn out in fifty columns. I had nothing more than a broken leg. He was a man on the verge of death. Yet he considered my feelings in advance of his own.

Had I known what I know now, I would have crawled to his office to say goodby . . .

Well, there's nothing more to say. A wonderful character has passed on, and many of us have lost a friend who can never be replaced.

But there is one consolation. For those of us who loved the man deafly, it will make everything so much easier when it comes our time to go. For then it will be simple to smile and say:

"So long, doc. I don't mind going. I'm just dropping over to see Sime."...

SET DEDICATION OF SCHOOL AT PATTON TWP.

Their work of constructing the building finished, Patton Township residents, members of the Rose Crest Community Club, will dedicate their new school and community building tomorrow night at 8 p. m.

The new structure, which will temporarily house the primary grades of the township, is located on school property at Young's Cross Roads on the Monroeville road.

The dedication program will include round and square dancing and games. Speakers expected include C. R. Dickey, county superintendent of schools, and John H. Watson, Turtle Creek postmaster.

Of one story, wood frame construction, the building is so designed that partitions can be removed to transform the building into a single large room for dancing or entertainments.

The Community Club, which was organized by Squire Raymond Long in July, undertook the construction of the new building when the School Board lacked funds for a new school house.

Two old houses were purchased, and the men of the club tore them down and used the materials to build the new structure. Women and children helped in the work after dinner each night by ripping the nails out of the old lumber.

Now the club plans to hold weekly entertainments in the building. The School Board has furnished the school, and small children will be spared a long walk to other distant schools this winter.

TWO NOTED OHIO PUBLISHERS DIE

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Elbert H. Baker, 79, chairman of the board of the Plain Dealer Publishing Company, died last night at Lakeside Hospital.

Ill only a week, he underwent an abdominal operation last Friday.

He had been active in the direction of the Cleveland Plain Dealer since 1898, after being associated with the Cleveland Leader and the Cleveland Herald.

AKRON, O., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Charles Landon Knight, 66, newspaper publisher and former Congressman, died at his home last night after an illness of two years.

WOUNDED MAN LINKED TO GANG

Tony Ramasky, 25, who has been shackled to a bed in the Braddock General Hospital since September 13 when he was shot by a railroad detective in the Pitcairn yards, is today believed to be the leader of one of the most successful holdup gangs in the county by Turtle Creek police and county detectives.

Holdup victims, who have been brought to his bedside during the past week, have already accused him of 12 "jobs."

The most daring of these was entering the Wilmerding Police Station late in 1930 and, with pointed gun, forcing former Chief James P. McGuire to release a prisoner, Steve Mauchan, believed to be a member of Ramasky's gang.

Ramasky was not identified until he had been in the hospital a week.

PROVE SLAYING, SLEUTH TOLD

Constantino Giana, 42, of 677 Independence street, arrested in connection with the murder of a man 23 years ago, was expected to be released from the county jail today if Patrolman John Spezzano, who as a boy in Italy nursed the determination to see the killer captured, failed to substantiate the charge.

Questioned by county detectives, Giana contended he had not come to Pittsburgh until 10 years after the murder is said to have occurred. The morgue records for 1910, show that the victim, John Russa, was supposed to have been slain in Carnegie.

Spezzano was a boy in Italy when his family received word from Carnegie of the murder.

U. S. PREPARED TO ENLARGE NAVY

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—President Roosevelt's rejection of the British suggestion that the United States postpone construction of the four projected 10,000-ton six-inch gun cruisers may be accepted by the world as notification this country intends to proceed with its naval building program, according to authoritative sources.

The President was said to be determined that nothing shall interfere with the long-delayed efforts to build the American Navy at least near treaty strength, as the other powers, including Great Britain, have done.

American rejection of the British proposal was made public in a formal announcement by the State Department, which read:

"In reply to suggestions from the British government that the laying down of any six-inch-gun cruisers larger than those now in existence might be deferred during the life of the Disarmament Conference or at least pending further discussion of the qualitative limitations of future ships, the American government has replied that it did not see its way clear to alter its delayed naval construction program or to suspend the laying down of any projected ships."

Japan Takes Action To Block Naval Cut

TOKIO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—A revision of naval regulations to enlarge the powers of the chief of the naval general staff on "questions related to a scheme of national defense" was announced today by the Japanese government.

The action was interpreted as carrying authority to block proposed agreements for naval limitations. A Navy office spokesman said the revision would enable Admiral Fushimi, the chief of staff, to veto any reduction or limitation of sea forces to which civilian authorities might agree with other powers.

HITLER EASES RESTRICTIONS

International News Service.

BERLIN, Sept. 27.—An important concession by the Hitler government with regard to Jewish firms doing business in Germany was seen today in a decree of Minister of Economics Schmitt ruling discrimination between Aryan and non-Aryan companies "unfeasible."

He said:

"Such discrimination will necessarily result in disturbances to economic recovery and exercise an unfavorable influence on employment."

Schmitt said he agreed with Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, who urged that no steps be taken against non-Aryan firms "unless they violate the law or the principles of business honesty."

Schmitt's decree gave general directions with regard to treatment of Aryan and non-Aryan business houses. Boycott of Jewish firms has never been sanctioned officially by the government.

JEWS' PLIGHT BEFORE LEAGUE

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT

International News Service.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, today forcibly brought the attention of the League of Nations to the plight of Jews in Germany in the opening address of the day before the League assembly.

Sir John, casting his eyes in the direction of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, Nazi minister of propaganda, and other members of the German delegation, said:

"The League has special responsibilities in assuring just and impartial treatment to those who by race, religion or language, differ from the governing majority in the country in which they reside."

Simon's main theme was disarmament, but he turned aside from that subject for a moment to remind the League of its duties, under the Paris peace treaties, to protect the rights of minorities in all countries.

LEAGUE FACING ROW OVER U. S. CUBAN STAND

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Universal Service.

GENEVA, Sept. 27.—American policy with regard to Cuba has been raised unofficially in League of Nations circles here and, unless the big powers prevail, smaller members may confront the league with another disagreeable dilemma.

Reports that Washington is about to intervene in Cuba and is planning to land Marines and troops excited some delegates of Central and South America. There was talk that, in the event of such intervention, the league's Latin-American members, headed by Mexico, might start a movement to protest to the league.

The big powers, it is understood, will discourage any such thought, as they believe it would be well nigh fatal for the League of Nations to bring itself into conflict with the United States.

HAVANA, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—More than 250,000 members of Spanish societies in Cuba planned to assemble today to protest a government decree forcing all practicing physicians to affiliate with the National Medical Federation.

Virtually all commercial activities in Havana and other important cities were to halt at noon to permit workers to participate in the nation-wide demonstrations.

Speculation went the rounds as to whether the closing of business would be for just one day, or would continue.

BUYERS CALLED KEY TO NRA SUCCESS

Work for Millions Depends on Drive, Woman Declares

In the buying power of the merchant's customer lies the success or failure of the NRA, in the opinion of Mrs. Robert K. Cochrane, Sr., member of the women's auxiliary of the local recovery committee. Speaking over Station KDKA yesterday, Mrs. Cochrane said:

"In order to accomplish the purpose of the NRA, the first hardship falls upon the merchant, who, though not apparently able to afford it, must either employ more help or reduce the number of hours open for business. It is up to us to help that type of merchant displaying the Blue Eagle, to stay in business.

IMPORTANT TO BUY NOW

"We can do that by going to his store, even though we must pay a few cents more for an article, because in so doing we are contributing our source of helpfulness in this economic battle by intelligent spending."

It is important to spend now, Mrs. Cochrane averred, because the object of the movement is to create a job for another person, who in turn will become a consumer and form another link in an endless chain of progress. The speaker held:

"We shall once more be back to that normal buying level, which in other words means normal times. Not depressed nor inflated times, but normal times."

SPEAKS OVER KQV

She declared that re-employment of millions now idle can only become possible when the employers agree upon uniform basis of co-operation and the consumers pledge their support only to those employers who "have realized that the old method of everyone for himself is passed."

Mrs. I. B. Kreimer will speak in the interest of the women's consumer pledge drive and the buy-now movement, sponsored by the Sun-Telegraph, tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock over station KQV.

Other speakers during the week will include Mrs. Frank Beech, Thursday at 4:55 p. m., WCAE; Miss Maud A. Miner, Thursday at 11:30 a. m., KDKA, and Mrs. C. W. Whitsell, Friday, 1:30 p. m., KQV.

Suckers Still Send Cash To The Old Stand

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The stock exchange will remain in New York. So send your money to the usual address.

The bidders and askers were headed for the farmers' market in Jersey City. Then the boys happened to think that you cannot sell a man out while he is on a ferry boat.

That's the first rule of Wall street. A man on the high seas is safe. Until he lands.

It dates back to the days when there was no radio. When a customer sails for his health no broker is allowed to issue bedside bulletins from a bear market.

The brokers and the quoters will stay in New York, where a tap on the shoulder is a national hook-up. And a pat on the back is assault with attempt to liquidate.

The farmers' bazar will cling to Jersey, the margin circus' hugs Monhattan and the farmers will have to get up an hour earlier to reach it.

MORE THAN 1,000 WHO GUARDED VOTE MACHINES ON ELECTION DAY LINED UP AT THE COURTHOUSE FOR THE PAY-OFF

VOTE MACHINE PROBE CALLS CUSTODIANS

Rees States Apparatus All in Good Order When Sent Out

Ten employes of the Bureau of Elections were scheduled to appear today before the committee investigating the breakdown of the voting machines primary day. They will be Chief Mechanic Albert Lauer, Chief Custodian Ray C. Dever and the eight custodians in charge of the eight zones in which machines were used.

The investigating committee composed of State Senator Frank J. Harris, chairman, and Attorneys Edward O. Tabor and William B. McFall, met for the first session yesterday, elected Fred Obley, their secretary and listened to the first two witnesses.

Director William T. Rees, of the Elections Department, was the first called and gave an outline of how the machines were prepared for use. He was followed by George P. Thomas, president of the Thomas Spacing Machine Company, the concern that repaired the machines.

TODAY'S WITNESSES

The witnesses today will tell just how many of the 952 machines used in the election, operated successfully and just how many of the complaints were of a serious nature. The custodians to be called today are Paul Ferraro, R. B. Ferguson, Edward M. Skapik, Robert Hughes, William Alcorn, F. C. Ferrante, Charles Murray and Charles Wagner.

Director Rees said yesterday that all the machines were in proper working order when sent out, and that had not the court sent out the paper ballots, the voting machines would all have worked, after a few minor adjustments. He further expressed himself as being of the opinion that the election boards for the most part did not want to use the machines and for that reason demanded the ballots before giving the machines a fair test.

REES TESTIFIES

Rees testified that the court ordered paper ballots distributed on a mandamus filed in behalf of voters from the Seventeenth District of the Fifth Ward. Rees said that an investigation showed that this machine had not been operated at any time after being delivered to the polling place. He said that the plunger which locks the machine, had not been removed, although the election boards were instructed in how to remove the plunger.

Chairman Harris announced that the committee probably would hold night sessions to enable everyone to appear. He further stated that instead of asking residents of Clairton, McKeesport and Duquesne to come to the court house to testify, the committee would hold sessions in each of these cities. The sessions will be held at night, Harris said.

The committee will meet today in the commissioners conference room.

'Throw You Out' McGovern Warns G. O. P. Lawyer

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern threatened to throw Attorney Saul L. Rubin out of the Returning Board session today.

Rubin, who has represented that he is counsel for the regular Republican organization and Mayor Herron, has also attempted to represent several election boards called in to make explanation of their returns.

Today events came to a head when he attempted to interfere in presentation of an affidavit by the election board of the First District of the First Ward, explaining 17 voided ballots in the box from that precinct.

Commissioner McGovern told him:

"We are leaning over backwards to be fair to these boards. If you insist on being obnoxious, we'll lift you up and throw you out bodily."

McGovern made it clear that his remarks did not include other attorneys representing the Republican party.

LINDSAY BARES VOTE CHARGES

Behind closed doors, Alexander P. Lindsay, defeated candidate for judiciary nomination, yesterday startled women members of the Mothers' Club in the Sixth United Presbyterian Church, North Highland avenue, with tales of vote "steals" and armed men with "tear-gas bombs concealed in false toes of their shoes at the primary last week."

After the meeting, however, Mr. Lindsay gave the following version of his address. He said:

"I gave them a talk on clean elections. The present election is probably as confused as any ever held in the city of Pittsburgh. The women asked me about the vote machines, and I told them I'd rather not discuss them until all the facts are in.

"I told them of the necessity for a change in present election laws and advocated permanent registration and ample opportunity to check up on all registrations prior to primaries or elections, as was proposed in the act offered to Assembly last year by the Election Law Conference of Pennsylvania, of which I am chairman.

"It was vetoed by the Governor at the suggestion of the sponsors because of the changes proposed by Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, of McKees Rocks."

21 MORE BOARDS CALLED

Twenty-one more election boards were ordered to report to the returning board—bringing the total so far called to 41—as the board continued its count of the elections in Allegheny County's primary.

In two districts tabulated today before the board, Councilmanic candidate William A. Magee lost 132 votes to Clifford B. Connelley as compared with the unofficial count.

Attacked With Pick, Man Badly Wounded

Carmine Mendes, 38, of Forest street, McKeesport, attacked with a miner's pick yesterday in the community gardens on the grounds of the National Tube Company, near Washington avenue, Dravosburg, was in serious condition in the McKeesport Hospital today.

BUSINESS MAN CATCHES BOY; GEMS FOUND

Women's Return Routs Robber; Screams Summon Neighbor

A youth, captured after he and a companion, according to a police charge, looted a Point Breeze home late yesterday, faced arraignment in Morals Court today.

Robert Courtwright, 16, of 322 Lehigh avenue, was captured by John T. Henderson, of 115 Elysian street, vice president of the Crandall-McKenzie & Henderson, Inc., cleaners, after a two-block chase. In his possession police reported finding jewelry valued at $1,500 stolen from the home of H. S. Wineland, of 6632 Fifth avenue.

INTERRUPTED BY BELL

Police said the boys returned to the Wineland home after being interrupted by a caller who rang the doorbell.

The loot said to have been found in Courtwright's pocket was obtained in the first visit. Wineland's daughter, Jean, and her aunt, Vina Neelan, returning from a shopping tour, found the house ransacked and someone tampering with the side door.

CRIES ATTRACT AID

The aunt ran outside, screaming for help, and the prowler ran. Her cries attracted Henderson, who was sitting on the front porch of his home. He pursued the youth and captured him at Fifth avenue and Beechwood boulevard, police said. The companion escaped.

The officers later announced Courtwright admitted he and his companion had made an unsuccessful attempt to enter the home of D. H. Longsdorf, 117 South Lang avenue. They were frightened by a neighbor. Police said they planned to question Courtwright concerning other house robberies in Point Breeze and Squirrel Hill.

VOTING MACHINE ACT ARGUED

Constitutionality of the state voting machine act was argued before the Pennsylvania Supreme court in session here today as the outcome of failure of Philadelphia County Commissioners to purchase machines authorized by the voters. Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the Commonwealth in compliance with powers vested in him under the act, ordered 800 machines from the Automatic Voting Machine Company, of Jamestown, N. Y. The voters had set up $2,000,000 for this purpose.

The commissioners lost their fight to obtain an injunction against Beamish in Dauphin County Court and appealed to the state's highest tribunal. The argument had been twice postponed.

William T. Connor, representing the commissioners, declared the act violated the debt section of the state constitution and the money, if spent, would exceed Philadelphia's legal borrowing power.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, for the state, branded the commissioners' attitude as a "flimsy pretext for thwarting the will of the people."

DEMOCRAT VOTE DRIVE LAUNCHED

The Democratic party launched its campaign to win into its folds anti-administration Republicans with a meeting last night in the Baxter High School under the auspices of the Thirteenth Ward Democratic Club.

In the home ward of Mayor John S. Herron, County Chairman David Lawrence told an audience that nearly filled the hall that "we have a two-to-one shot in William N. McNair if we keep the people thinking that way."

He said there were 130,000 registered voters in Pittsburgh who did not want Herron for Mayor as compared with "about 65,000" who had voted for the Mayor in the primaries.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD FORMED

Election of officers and adoption of the first change in the constitution and by-laws since 1916 brought to a close yesterday the forty-fourth annual convention of the Allegheny County Sabbath School Association in the German Evangelical Lutheran Church, Smithfield street.

The change in the constitution was the creation of an auxiliary board of representatives of the 46 districts covered by the association. The board will consist of one representative elected by each of the component districts, and will function only in an advisory capacity.

The board of directors approved a code to govern officers and teachers of church schools and official bodies in churches, and recommended it to churches throughout the county.

F. S. Cousley was re-elected president of the association; Charales H. Lehmann, vice president; H. E. Carmack, secretary, and George T. Marshall, treasurer. E. W. Washabaugh was elected vice president and Homer C. Clarke, Prof. A. J. Weigle, H. S. Loomis and Julius E. Graf, members of the board of directors.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Sept. 27.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Roscoe Turner crossed the country in 10 hours. That's bringing towns too close together.

Will Rogers

Railroads are finally waking up. They are building a new train now that wasn't modeled in the nineties.

But we have to take the bad news with the good. Ring Lardner died. You can always get better planes, better trains, but we can't get another Ring Lardner. What a privilege to have known him since those good old days when he wrote sketches for Mr. Ziegfeld's Follies.

In years to come when libraries put just books in one wing, and literature in the other, you are mighty liable to find Lardner's writing right in with the literature. Yours, WILL.

PUBLIC WORKS FOR JOBS O. K'D

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The public works administration today alloted $2,332,260 for 31 non-federal projects in 12 states, saying it was intended to provide 19,383 man-months of quick employment.

The constructions will include school buildings, sewers, streets, waterworks, municipal buildings and agricultural buildings.

Twenty-six of the allotments were for outright federal grants only of 30 per cent of the cost of labor and materials of the projects, the remaining 70 per cent to be raised locally.

Five were on the basis of 30 per cent grants with the balance of 70 per cent being loaned on the projects and to be repaid to the federal government.

The projects included an $800,000 water system in Clevaland, O.

THIEVES STEAL DENTAL GOLD

Gold, valued at $100, was stolen from the dental offices of Dr. John O. Stewart and Dr. Thomas A. Deeds, Pilgrim Building, Oakmont, at noon today, according to police. Both dentists were at lunch when the theft occurred.

Dental supplies, gold and drugs valued at more than $100 were stolen from the office of Dr. George W. Horrocks, of 112 Westinghouse avenue, Wilmerding, by thieves, who jimmied a door while the dentist was absent late yesterday, police reported.

PILOTS HERE GET PAY RAISE

Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., announced today that it had boosted the pay of its pilots to a rate which will enable them, officials said, to earn a salary of $7,000 a year or more.

The pilots will receive from $4 an hour while flying planes of 125 miles-an-hour speed or slower, up to $5 an hour for 200-mile-an-hour planes.

A bonus of $2 an hour is to be paid for each hour of night flying. In addition the pilots receive travel expenses while away from their home bases.

King Resignation Denied by Wallace

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today denied published reports that Dr. Clyde L. King, chief of the department's dairy division, had resigned.

Dr. King was formerly chairman of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission.

Husband's Story Brings Pair's Second Divorce

Daniel Klein, of 2116 Wightman street, today had his second divorce from Helen Klein, North Homewood avenue. Judge John P. Egan granted Klein the decree after he testified:

"We were remarried at the request of Mrs. Klein, because of her opinion it would be for the best interest of our 7-year-old daughter. Recently she saw the child in swimming and turned her back on her and me."

Following the first divorce in June, 1929, the Kleins were remarried January 6, 1930. Klein said his wife had a habit of throwing dishes, knives and forks at him, and continued:

"Because of her treatment I lost 20 pounds in weight."

Klein charged cruel and barbarous treatment and indignities. His wife's language and conduct, he said, made their presence resented at several places where they lived.

Durant Is Spurred By Determination To Help Siddall

CHAPTER XVIII.

Durant looked about; it was exactly like Gertie's apartment on the floor below in its plan; in its furnishings it was completely different. Crude pictures, bawdy, were on the walls; the rug fought with the curtains, and every color of the rainbow was to be found in the upholstery and cushions. Cigaret and cigar stubs littered the tables, and some of them had fallen unheeded to the floor. Circles showed where glasses had rested on the arms of chairs. Articles of clothing were scattered on the floor.

Durant's nose wrinkled in faint disgust as he made his way into the bedroom. The litter here was as unattractive as that in the living room. And for a moment he stood in the center of the room, the esthetic side of him busier than the material. Then the wrinkle disappeared from his nose and the contempt from his eyes. He went to work with a swift sureness that never seemed quite suited to his appearance.

He began with the bathroom; throwing open the medicine cabinet, he took in its contents at a glance. His lips pursed as he saw a hypodermic needle and a tiny bottle of pellets which he guessed to be morphine. In another moment he was in the bedroom again, opening bureau drawers, closing them, searching in the closet, looking even behind the bawdy pictures on the wall. What he looked for, he didn't know; he hoped to find something that would stimulate his mind to thought. What that thing might be he couldn't even have guessed, any more than he could have told Gazotti the nature of the things that Gertie Waxted didn't know she knew. But he

Synopsis

Jackson Durant, young lawyer, has alienated his society friends and lost his fiancee, Sue Leonard, because of his success as the "mouthpiece" who won the acquittal of the notorious Tony Gazotti. Miss Leonard then becomes engaged to Tom Siddall, youthful broker. Shortly afterwards Siddall is arrested, charged with the murder of Mimi Montagne, who was shot dead on the terrace of a penthouse owned by Jim Crelliman. Sue begs Durant to get busy in Siddall's behalf. Durant believes the broker is innocent and secures the aid of Gazotti, who introduces him to Gertie Waxted, closest friend of the murdered entertainer. The lawyer takes Gertie to his apartment for questioning. She agrees to help Siddall's defense. Durant borrows her ring and visits the pawnshop of Levitoff, pawnbroker, who told police he sold a gun to Siddall. Shortly afterwards Levitoff is found shot to death. Durant suspects Crelliman. Durant is surprised and puzzled when he sees Sue with Crelliman.

NEW BANK DEAL PLEDGED BY U. S.

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—A "new deal" for bank depositors whereby they will be more accurately informed as to the condition of the bank they do business with, has been arranged by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

In the next condition call, O'Connor will direct the banks to show for the first time how much "public" or "state" funds are deposited with them.

In the Comptroller's opinion, much of the state or public funds [illegible] in banks but a short time. [illegible] large sum of state money is shown on the bank's statement, and is included with the ordinary demand and time deposits, it gives a misleading impression as to the bank's actual condition.

He said:

"The public is entitled to straight, honest information and will get it as long as I am Comptroller of the Currency. There will be no secrets kept from the public in regard to banks and their condition.

"I have felt for some time that all bank deposits should be segregated, and this will be done at the next call asking for the condition of banks."

PLANS COUNTY CIVIL SERVICE

A civil service commission to protect county employes from political removals is planned by Chairman C. C. McGovern of the Board of County Commissioners, who today announced a plan to introduce a bill for it in the Legislature.

McGovern said the commission would protect reliable employes from politicians who fill all possible jobs with their followers, and would permit removal of payrollers holding jobs only by vote-getting ability.

McGovern said he would suggest a board appointed every six years by the governor, thus putting it out of the reach of one governor in two.

He said the system would protect elected officials from job seekers, as applicants would go directly to the commission.

DEGREE GIVEN BISHOP HAYES

A doctor of law degree was bestowed upon Bishop Ralph Leo Hayes, newly-ordained bishop of Montana, last night by the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president of Duquesne University, at a dinner held by the priests of the Holy Ghost Order in the faculty house on the campus.

The degree was presented as a surprise. A purse was presented by the alumni.

The Rev. M. J. Brannigan, vice president of the university, made a short address.

SWIGART TALKS TO GORDON ON BANKS' FATE

J. D. Swigart, chief state banking examiner for Western Pennsylvania, was in Harrisburg today engaged in conferences with Dr. W. D. Gordon, secretary of banking, concerning reopening of restricted state banks.

The discussions with Gordon are expected to take in every restricted bank in Western Pennsylvania that has submitted a plan for reopening.

Usually well-informed sources here predicted that permanent closing of a few institutions throughout the state would be announced at the end of the week, but that other action would be deferred as the State Banking Department continued waiting for improved commodity prices before making wholesale decisions on reopening or permanent closing.

Meanwhile, a number of banks here continued plans for reorganization through sale of stock to depositors and the public. Some opposition was reported from depositors on the ground that stockholders in restricted institutions have not been called upon to make any sacrifices such as payment of their liability as stockholders under past banking laws.

COUZENS IN NEW BANK ATTACK

DETROIT, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—United States Senator James Couzens last night told a group of 1,200 depositors in Detroit's two closed national banks that "I am satisfied that a determined effort to get at all the transactions of the bank holding companies and their subsidiaries will convict somebody of crime."

The Senator read a long list of loans made by the two banks to members of their own directorates and others, together with comments appended by bank examiners in their reports to officials at Washington. Included were reports of reputed loans to "a prominent doctor" for $376,000, upon which payments of only $2,000 had been made in six months.

Squirrel Hill House Entered by Thieves

Thieves forced entry to the home of S. E. Fineman, of 5566 Bellerock place, Squirrel Hill, last night and escaped with a diamond ring values at $450 and $5 cash, according to police.

Hot Stove Seizing Too Much for Bailiffs

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Bailiffs of Judge Theodore F. Ehler's court frankly admitted they were up against a rather hard job—that of seizing a stove in a cafe for non-payment of rent. Displaying hands covered with bandages, they said:

"We wish to do our duty, but don't believe that means picking up hot stoves. Four times we sneaked up on that one and each time the owner had the stove red hot."

The court ordered that the stove be kept cool on October 20.

GIRLS HIKE HERE FROM FLORIDA

Two high school girls, who left Santa Rosa, Fla., Saturday because their families could not support them, are today safe at the home of Albert Rankin, of 803 Vermont avenue, Glassport, after hitch-hiking all the way from the South, penniless.

The girls, Anna Whoolery, 16, and Anna Thompson, 18, arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday morning on their way to the home in Glassport, where Miss Whoolery's mother-in-law lives. From Pittsburgh they followed the railroad tracks to Glassport.

Rankin said he will furnish a home for the girls while they are looking [illegible]

BANK OPENINGS FORECAST

Opening of restricted national banks and release of millions of dollars from closed national banks today was foreseen by Congressman Henry Ellenbogen as the Comptroller of the Currency ruled that these institutions can accept Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds.

Ellenbogen protested the previous ruling of Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor, which prevented the banks' participation. The Congressman sees the ruling as a guide for all state banking departments which have yet to rule on closed state banks. He said:

"The ruling in many cases will provide sufficient funds for restricted national banks to open on a non-restricted basis and will permit receivers of closed national banks to distribute large sums of money as dividends to depositors, providing millions of dollars of new purchasing power."

Prudence Penny is not only getting hundreds of favorite recipes for her new contest in the Sun-Telegraph, but she is also getting scores of letters from readers thanking her for the valuable suggestions they have already obtained by reading the prize recipes in this newspaper.

Prudence Penny, one of America's outstanding authorities on household economics and domestic science, is offering prizes of $15 in cash every day for the best recipes submitted to her by the housewives of Pittsburgh and vicinity. As these recipes come in day by day they are turned over to experts who select one for a $5 prize every day and 10 others for a prize of $1 each.

It has already been demonstrated that the women of Pittsburgh have an abundance of favorite recipes for the preparation of appetizing things to serve. They have already served these to their families and friends and they know that they are out of the ordinary. These are the recipes Prudence Penny is looking for. Perhaps you have one or more? VANILLA KIFFELS

One-half lb. flour.
Six egg yolks (only).
One teaspoon of vanilla.

Filling—
One-half lb. powdered sugar.
One-half lb. walnuts (ground).
Six egg whites (beaten stiffly).

Sift the flour, add the butter little at a time, and cut it as for shortening in pie dough. Add the yolks of the eggs one at a time, add the cream and the vanilla, and mix it well, 'till you have all the ingredients stirred well together.

Make into few balls, and have it wrapped in a waxed paper; and have it thoroughly chilled.

When chilled, roll out very thin as you can make it, cut in even squares, add a teaspoonful of the filling, and make the corners of each end meet, and form to resemble a half moon.

Have the oven heated to the temperature of 350 degrees.

Bake the kiffels on an ungreased pan, and bake them 20 to 30 minutes, till a beautiful golden color. They will seem to shrink, but do not fear as they will retain their forms when properly baked. Will keep indefinitely. Sift powdered sugar, when they are taken out of the oven. Makes wonderful cake present for Christmas. This recipe will make about 50 half moons.

The filling is made by having the egg whites thoroughly beaten, add the sifted powdered sugar slowly and beat it in with the wisk egg beater; add the walnuts, and beat them also in with the mixture.

FIRM PRESSES GAS SUIT

The Davison Coke & Iron Company today pressed its suit for $291,876 against the Manufacturers Light & Heat Company. The Davison company contends a violation of contract.

It complains that in 1928 the Manufacturers Light & Heat Company contracted for three billion cubic feet of gas annually but by November, 1931, had accepted only half of that amount and refused the rest. The suit was filed in May and the statement of claim was added to the record today.

There is a tidy sum of money in a New Castle bank awaiting a former Pittsburgher who can't be found.

The missing man is Stanley W. Chandler, 60, or older. He once lived in Sharon, and years ago conducted a collection agency in Pittsburgh.

A few months ago a cousin, a widow, named him a beneficiary in her will. New Castle bank officials would say no more than that his share is several thousand dollars.

PUBLIC HEALTH BURDEN GROWS

Plans to appear before the Welfare Fund's budget committee to point out the inability of Pittsburgh hospitals to accept free maternity cases, due to lack of funds, were being made today by the Public Health Nursing Association.

The condition of the hospitals, it was said, has thrown the bulk of maternity nursing for charity patients on the shoulders of the nursing association, now in need of funds.

The association this year has operated within its budget of $150,000 from the Welfare Fund, it was said, and a request for $195,000 for 1934 will be made.

Two 'Boy Bandits' Take Bicycle From Third

Some children are to much like their elders, Walter Green, 15, of 515 Amberson avenue, would have told you today.

Walter, pedaling his bicycle up Verona boulevard, was stopped by two boys of his own age. As he halted, one said:

Walter yielded to numbers. Then he walked to the home of his uncle, J. Cannon, 308 California avenue, Oakmont.

2 MEN CAUGHT IN HILL HOLDUP

A short time after three Negroes forced three customers and Benjamin Friedman, proprietor of a grocery store at 2404 Webster avenue, to lie face down upon the floor while they looted the cash register of $60, two suspects were arrested.

One of the suspects was Robert Callaway, 27, of 725 Kirkpatrick street, who police said had been recognized as a former special officer at the Greenlee baseball field. The other was William Walker, 26, of 2222 Wylie avenue.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Maytair —With— Patricia Pitt

Our debutante list is almost at the 45 mark! Just think of the parties the younger set will have listed on their social calendars this winter.

With just one party being given for each girl, there'll be about 45 red-letter days, and in addition there are always "extra" parties.

All this anticipation of the gayest season in ages is started by another addition to the list—charming young Vardi Marshall.

Vardi is the daughter of the Lee Holmes Marshalls. She went to Dobbs Ferry, as have so many of our debs. The plans for her coming-out party are still indefinite.

Church Wedding

In the church for which her bridegroom was co-architect, Sacred Heart, famous in art circles for its distinctive beauty, Martha Beck became the bride of Alfred D. Reid this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

The pastor, the Rev. Thomas F. Coakley, officiated, assisted by the Rev. Linus Brugger, O. S. B., pastor of the Most Holy Sacrament Church, Greensburg. The bride is the daughter of the Joseph A. Becks, of Lytton avenue, and the bridegroom is the son of Judge and Mrs. Ambrose B. Reid, of the D'Arlington Apartments, East End.

Instead of a veil, the bride wore a lace shawl, ivory with age, from her great-grandmother's trousseau. Her gown was of cream velvet in the princess mode, having long, tight-fitting sleeves, a short train and a high, boat-shaped neck-line. She carried lilies.

Bridal Attendant

Her only attendant, Emma Finke, of Dayton, O., her classmate at Trinity College, Washington, wore turquoise blue velvet, fashioned like the bride's costume. Her turban was of the same velvet, and her slippers matched. She carried an arm bouquet of autumn-hued flowers.

B. Meredith Reid was his brother's best man. There were no ushers. A wedding breakfast in the Pittsburgh Athletic Club and a reception for members of the two families and intimate friends followed the ceremony.

Bermuda Cruise

Mr. and Mrs. Reid will motor to New York and sail on the Monarch of Bermuda for a Bermuda honeymoon. They expect to be at home in Pittsburgh after the first of November.

The bride is a Trinity College girl, and the bridegroom is a graduate of Georgetown University and Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Wedding Attendant

A debutante of the past season, Nancy Bowman Wise, daughter of the William F. Wises, who's studying to be a doctor, will abandon her serious work to be a bridesmaid at a wedding next month.

She'll be a member of the bridal party for the marriage of Lucette Rathbone Andrews, daughter of Mrs. Sara Andrews, of Dalton, Mass., and New York, to Henry Hoblitzelle Clifford, of Pasadena, Cal.

The ceremony will take place in the First Congregational Church of Dalton, Mass., October 6. John Stewart Tritle, also of Pittsburgh, will be an usher at the wedding.

Mrs. George Cass Hutchinson gave a luncheon yesterday at the Allegheny Country Club for Barbara West, of Grosse Ile, Mich., who is visiting her just now. Barbara's engagement to George Cass Hutchinson, Jr., has just been announced.

Michigan Guest

Mrs. William D. George gave a luncheon, too, at the Allegheny Country Club for her sister, Mrs. J. H. Morse, here from North Andover, Mass., for the Robinson-George wedding Monday.

Irene M. Gruey Married To Joseph G. Gabig

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

If it had rained when they left Sacred Heart Church this morning after the wedding, the Alfred D. Reids would have been the first to use the stone-arch covered side driveway, just finished yesterday.

But the rain let up for a few seconds, and they used another exit. Mr. Reid has the distinction of being co-architect of Sacred Heart.

The cleaners' strike is driving many of the smart set to resort to forgotten garments or to buy new ones. And one smart young woman—I won't mention her name—had to borrow one of her mother's wraps to wear over her evening gown for the O'Neill opening!

Fashion Rounds the Clock for the Early Autumn Days in Pittsburgh

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IT SOMETIMES seems as if the woman who is determined to be well-dressed has an awful lot to contend with. But the dog days have been pushed off the calendar at last, and once the September Equinox gets its mind off its exhibitionism, there are happy days ahead for new frocks and whatnot.

No matter whether the country or the city beckons in these 'tween season days, any girl can get along nicely if she has four good-looking costumes to see her around the clock. She will want to look trig for village shopping or town bargain hunting in the morning; she will have plenty of chances to don a luncheon contract frock several afternoons a week; and she will want to be ready to play the part of a lady of the evening, in formal togs or comfortably chic informal ones.

* * *

IT is a toss-up between hardy silk and feminine woolen for the first fall daytime costumes intended for casual wear. There is something new in silk knits, for instance—a boucle which can't be induced to sag, shrink or bulge out in disfiguring balloons. And the new woollens of novelty weave are just light enough to lend themselves to "dressmakery" touches, and just heavy enough to take on good man-tailoring with an air.

The very rough crepes are offered in new effects and colors, running the newer ribbed silks a close second on seasonable favoritism. Both these materials tend to be the least bit formal in the manner which goes to luncheon at the Casino, or descends to the house party Sunday luncheon after a tough Saturday night at the country club.

* * *

VELVET is all over the scene at the cocktail hour, sacrificing only its evening length and its evening decollete to tag itself as a "before six" opportunity.

For evening, the American woman hails the return of lame. Pliant, glimmering seductively, cut as often as not in the old-new medevial mode, this metallic material6 has always been warmly-welcomed after its brief eclipses, and it expresses dashingly the return to better times.

The silhouette of very formal evening gowns has not changed very much; fulness set well below the knees in flounce effect is the greatest innovation. Front necklines remain very high, and the back decolletage as daringly low as a dressmaker can contrive it.

Above, a morning trotteur, rust crepe with a white bib. Upper right, a sophisticated lunch frock in olive green crepe, bias cut-to-fit. Lower left, a grape blue velvet dance frock, with arrethyst touches. Lower right, a cocktail gown, black velvet with lace sleeves.

Through the Spyglass
Viewing the New

We're three days old, and what a lot of things we've seen for one so young! Today our faithful Spyglass has spotted some fascinating new numbers (some of them for the "Bawth," at that!) Call the Spyglass, Grant 6500, or write in, sending a self-addressed stamped envelope for names of the shops.

Hot news: Dese yere hot plates of green enamel sho' is sumpin' fo' only 98c. At least, that's what we 'lows! And to return to sanity . . . they WERE $1.49 not too long ago. "Bargain!" we screech.

* * *

Slinky? . . . Well, rather. Black crepe satin gloves finished with the new high-fashion of monkey fur. Sizes 6, 6½, 7. Priced $3.50.

* * *

This floats . . . and it's a soap (but not the kind you're thinking about!) It is a wooden bowl of soap which comes with a lovely brush. And you . . . well, you recline and make nice soapy puddles with the brush as the bowl floats 'round you! A fine English make . . . good for two-score or more "bawths," priced $5.50 (which isn't as much as it would seem, being as how you get the brush, too!)

* * *

. . . and though it's still a while 'til Saturday night, our mind still runs on baths. And the piny, spicy scent of a new oil lures us to tell you more of it. It's good for exactly 64 baths (says so on the bottle) and costs $5.

* * *

. . . 'n just this last as to what to put ON yourselves whilst IN your tub . . . we loudly proclaim from the housetops the value of a certain bath ingredient which for 60c does more in the way of pepping one up than any thing (we-e-el . . . almost anything!) we know. It gets very bubbly and you end up by feeling as if you were sittjng in a cloud . . . and quite as elevated!

Edgewood Club to Go 'Adventuring' This Year

What a good time the Edgewood Woman's Club has promised itself this season! With such an exciting topic as "Adventuring Through Literature Hither and Yon" an interesting year was to be expected. But when you read subtopics like "Adventures by Boat," "Hoboing," "Adventures in Pennsylvania," "Covered Wagon Trails," 'A Christmas Adventure," 'Footloose in the British Isles," "Adventuring Through Ice and Snow," "Imaginary Adventures" and "Humorous Adventures," you have some idea of the extent to which the group will go "adventuring."

The majority of programs will be presented by the members themselves, but also on the list are the Rev. Dr. William R. Farmer, who will give the "Christmas Adventure;" Mrs. Frank F. Corby, who will give adventures in poetry, and Miss Cecil V. Pearce, who is to talk on Java. And the annual play will mark the March open meeting and tea.

Each member will relate a vacation adventure at the opening meeting and tea next Wednesday in the Edgewood Club.

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

A program in Carnegie Institute, and a talk by Dr. Thomas S. Baker on "Germany's Place in International Affairs" are November's highlights, a play reading, play production and an address by the Rev. Dr. S. H. Goldenson on "Progress" standing out in December.

A review of Roosevelt's "Looking Forward" is listed for January, as is a talk by Mrs. L. Walter Mason on "Our Church," "Keeping Step With Science," and an address by the Rev. Frank E. SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Second Shortstop to Win. Grid Equipment Big Item. Test for Heavies.

GIANT THROWING ARMS SERIES FACTORS

As usual, in doping out the world series, John McGraw comes up with a slant all his own. He sees outfield arms as the deciding factor, something that everybody else has overlooked, and he tips the Senators to lose because he thinks they will be cut down where they are strongest—in their baserunning. The former Giant pilot estimates that the Cronins won fully one-third of their victories during the regular season by going for that extra base, stretching singles into doubles, and doubles into triples.

John J. McGraw

But in McGraw's opinion, the American League champions will get the shock of their lives when they try to run wild on the Giants, when they try to take extra bases on Mel Ott, Joe Moore and George Davis. Those boys throw strikes to every base, Bill Terry's predecessor observes, and with their baserunning shut off, the Senators will be just another ball club. McGraw does not underrate the Washington outfit. He pronounces it a fine, smart, hustling ball club. But he remarks that when you turn off a spigot you shut off the water, and that the Giants have a triple spigot in the arms of Ott, Moore and Davis.

One single stretched into a double often means the winning of a tight game, the kind expected in this year's title series, and McGraw thinks that the Giants, slow as they are, are more likely to get the breaks in this respect than the Senators, because Goslin and Manush are likely to find those Polo Ground walls hard to play. They may have their troubles guaging the rebounds, and if they make one mistake the Giants surely will take those extra sacks.

CRONIN SECOND ACTIVE SHORTSTOP TO WIN

Hughey Jennings and Donie Bush were pennant-winning managers after they quit playing shortstop and retired to the bench, but Joe Cronin is the first pilot in 54 years and only the second in the entire history of the National and American Leagues to lead a club to the flag while still actively holding down the shortfield position. The only other shortstop ever to win a pennant while a playing manager was George Wright, who piloted the Providence Grays to the National League peak in 1879.

Bill Terry is the sixth active first baseman to manage a pennant-winning club in the majors. The first was Adrian C. Anson, who captured three consecutive National League flags with the old Chicago White Stockings in 1880-81-82 and came back with two more in 1885-86. John Morrill finished first with the Boston Nationals in 1883. Charley Comiskey led the original St. Louis Browns to four straight championships in the American Association in 1885-86-87-88. Frank Chance headed the Chicago Cubs to the National League honors in 1906-07-08-10, and Jake Stahl was skipper of the

DOYLE SELECTS GIANTS TO COP IN SERIES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Despite the majority opinion which seems to designate the Washington Senators as a club superior to the New York Giants, it is the opinion of this writer that the National League entry will triumph in the coming championship games.

Were the Senators and Giants in the same league and playing out a schedule of 154 games, I would choose the Cronin entry, but World Series titles being decided by hunches, breaks, et cetera, the Terry Clan seems to have the advantage in the short competition.

POINTS TO YANKS

Most of the championship events in sportdom run over an endurance course. Boxing titles are not decided on four-round bouts, for instance, yet it is possible for a diamond entry to grab off the big title in four fast rounds. Exhibit "A" are the Yanks, who turned the trick three times.

The competition between the Senators and Giants should run at least six games, but the National Leaguers appear to have a big bulge at the start. They have Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher for slab starters in the first two battles and these scraps are to be fought on a trick park which is apt to puzzle most of the foemen.

Joe Cronin's fighting spirit together with the inspiration he furnishes his club may be able to offset the New York advantage, but the "inside" odds should be on the side of the Polo Grounders.

Ripley Explanation

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: DRAWING THREE CARTOONS SIMULTANEOUSLY—Another unique and unbelievable accomplishment to be found in my Believe It or Not Odditorium at The Century of Progress, Chicago, is that of Henry Paul Burke, formerly of Calumet, Mich., who gives his exhibition of drawing three cartoons simultaneously—one with each hand and another by tying a pencil on his right foot. Seeing is believing, and anyone of the 1,200,000 Odditorium visitors who have seen Burke perform will vouch for his astounding accomplishment.

With several important changes in its starting lineup, Pittsburgh's professional football team takes the field for its second National League game tonight against the vaunted Chicago Cardinals at Forbes Field. The kickoff is slated for 8:30 o'clock, and another crowd of the generous proportions of the one which saw the locals battle the New York Giants last week is anticipated.

The principal change in the lineup is one whereby Elmer Schwarz, 210-pound fullback from Washington State, will start at quarterback, replacing Schaffer, formerly of W. & J.

DE CARBO TO START

The other changes will see Nick De Carbo, former Duquesne University star, at left guard in place of Letsinger, of Purdue, and Jimmy Clark, former Pitt fullback, at one of the halfback posts, replacing Bucky Moore, who is injured.

Coach Jap Douds, of the Pirates, has been working with the new combination for a couple of days and feels satisfied it will click in good fashion.

Angelo Brovelli, former St. Mary's ace, will play the other halfback position, and Tony Holm,

TERRY, CRONIN TELL HOW THEY WON FLAGS

UNQUENCHABLE TEAM SPIRIT BIGGEST FACTOR IN SUCCESS OF CLUBS

By BILL TERRY

Manager, New York Giants, 1933 National League Champions.

Baseball has produced its share of thrills for me over 18 seasons, but none that brought the same satisfaction I felt in St. Louis last week when the score board at Sportsman's Park showed that the Giants had won the National League pennant.

Bill Terry

It was my first year as a manager, you know, and I guess that does make a difference. I can't imagine now that any future victory will seem so complete unless it be a world series triumph—which, by the way, I am confident the Giants will achieve.

My first reaction, I must confess, was a purely personal exultation. We had won, and victory always is sweet. But this one meant a little something more to me and to all the players. It was a reward for a year of hard work, of consistent, persistent baseball: it proved worth-while loyalty and co-operation and the splendid spirit that marked our play together.

DETERMINATION WINS

The Giants are a hard-working, determined team, industrious, eager, spirited, one that hangs in there when trouble threatens. I've heard them compared to a college team. I'll say this: No college team ever achieved a finer mental balance, ever accomplished its appointed task with less friction or fewer internal differences.

Some sports writers have been kind enough to give me much credit for this splendid show of team spirit. If any is due, it is because I had the common, ordinary sense to appreciate that that quality is essential to success in baseball, because I set it up as a standard by which to gauge baseball values.

I decided on that point last fall, after the Giants had carried the 1932 campaign to a disappointing conclusion. I realized then that a different spirit was necessary, that the team as it was constructed then couldn't achieve the desired results. The team had grown mentally and spiritually tired, had been balked and disappointed so often that it had lost the urge to win.

TELLS OF TRADES

To that conclusion are to be traced the numerous player trades of last winter, some of which at the time startled the fans. Admittedly, I sacrificed some great ball players. Freddie Lindstrom, Shanty Hogan, Willie Walker—topnotchers all of them. But at the Polo Grounds they'd lost just that extra something; what they needed was a change of environment. Lindy, for one, has enjoyed an unusually successful season in a new setting. Chick Fullis, too, did well for the Phillies.

In seeking replacements, I demanded that they meet the new standards I had set. I preferred the solid virtues, steadiness, poise and earnestness instead of dash and flash. Gus Mancuso, I knew, was of that type, and George Davis also.

Blondy Ryan I knew less about last winter, but the reports of the scouts were favorable. Anyway, one look at him in Los Angeles convinced me that he would help us. He's been more than just a help; he's been the spark plug of the team. As much as anything else, I think, his telegram to us in St. Louis in July, intended as a joke, of course, "Am en route, we can't lose," confirmed the team's conviction that it could win the pennant.

'CAN'T LOSE,' SLOGAN

This message from an injured player was the keynote of the team's spirit in the crucial battles that followed. In the end we had to carry the fight to enemy fields, to Boston, to Pittsburgh and to Chicago. "We can't lose" the boys told themselves—and they didn't.

And I'm sure the same spirit, the same qualities that prevailed during the National League race, will bring us victory in the big series.

By JOE CRONIN

Manager, Washington Senators, 1933 American League Champions.

Our Washington club has won a pennant and there's no happier man in the land than I. And I want to tell the world right now that the winning of the American League pennant by the club of which I am fortunate enough to be the manager was made possible only by the wonderfully fine men I had working with me right down the line.

Joe Cronin

When I was given the job of manager last October by Mr. Griffith, there were many in the baseball world—and many more outside of it, but intensely interested in it, too—who were a bit skeptical of my ability to take care of the position. The general opinion was that I was too young to assume such a responsibility and that the added burden of management would just about make me useless as a player.

PRAISES TEAM SPIRIT

I'll admit that I was pretty nervous when I got the job. I knew I'd be in charge of quite a number of players who had had much more experience in big league baseball. But I felt that I had been around ball players long enough to understand them and that so long as I was working with them they would work with and for me.

This year I have found that I was right. I have endeavored to be merely another ball player among ball players the whole season and our relations with one another on the Washington club have been fine from the start of the championship race.

Never before have I been on a ball club that had such remarkable team spirit. It's been wonderful, I'll say. Not only has every member of the Washington Club co-operated with me in a big way, but the men also have co-operated with one another to such an extent that our club has bumped into few rough spots in the course of the fight for the pennant.

BALL PLAYERS' CLUB

There have been a few differences between some of the men and myself here and there. That's bound to happen on any club. But the differences have been slight and they never have affected the progress of the club. I am happy to say that every members of the Washington Club is made up of the most unselfish lot of players it has been my fortune to be associated with. It is a ball players' club.

Filipino Boxer Stabbed by Woman

OAKLAND, Cal., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Pancho Villa, Filipino boxer, was treated at a hospital here today for a deep gash in his right arm he said was inflicted by a woman who accused him of flirting with her.

Villa said he called to a friend who was passing on the other side of the street. The friend did not hear the call and walked on. The woman stepped up to him, he said, and accused him of shouting at her. She drew a knife, the fighter said, and lunged at his chest. He sidestepped the thrust and caught the blade in the arm.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Back in 1902-'03, Richard B. Perry played football for old Pittsburgh High School while attending South High . . . Today, his son, Richard B. Perry, Jr., is a guard at Princeton University. . . . The younger Perry attended Dormont High School for two years and Kiski for one, and now is a sophomore at Princeton.

West Virginia University folks think their team should be installed the underdog for its game with the Dukes here tomorrow night. . . . The Dukes can't see why they should be the big fellows . . . It's purely a psychological proposition, the idea being that the team that wins when it isn't supposed to win gets a lot of credit and the team that loses when it is supposed to win is 42 other kinds of a bum.

R. B. Perry, Jr.

The Zivic brothers and their manager, Luke Carney, have been in Los Angeles long enough now for a postcard to get back here from them. . . . How would you like to be in the shoes of Freddie Lindstrom, Pirate outfielder, who was traded to the local club by the New York Giants last fall and thus misses the impending World Series?

Half of the 10 clubs in the National Professional Football League boast coaches who are former pro players . . . They are the Chicago Bears, headed by George Hales; Cincinnati, A. J. Jolley; New York Giants, Steve Owen; Pittsburgh Pirates, Jap Douds, and Green Bay, Charley Lambeau . . . The other clubs are handled by these men: . . . Brooklyn, Capt. John McEwan, former Army coach; Boston, Lone Star Dietz; Chicago Cardinals, who play here tonight, Paul Schissler, former Oregon State coach; Portsmouth, Potsy Clark, former Kansas and Butler coach, and Philadelphia, Lud Wray, former Penn coach.

With less than half of the regular positions on the Carnegie Tech football team set at this time, the boys are clubbing each other with great gusto in the scrimmage . . . One job open is at left guard, where Clyde Heinzer and Henry Dreshar are fighting it out . . . They are fraternity brothers, but they sometimes forget the sacred ties.—HARRY KECK.

PAUL MOSS, ALL-AMERICA END AT PURDUE LAST FALL

CRONIN KEEPS FANS GUESSING

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Joe Cronin, the young manager of the Washington Senators, has decided to pull a little masterminding as to just which one of his big-four pitchers will be thrown against the Giants next Tuesday at the Polo Grounds.

If Cronin himself knows who will start, and it appears that he well may, he is keeping the choice a secret.

Most of the grandstand managers have picked Alvin Crowder, the husky right-hander who was the workhorse of the Nationals' pitching staff this season.

But the whisper from several of the capital's baseball wise men was that it may be Monte Weaver. The former mathematics professor has been stepping along fast after recovering from a bad mid-season slump.

Here's how Cronin himself is answering the dozen or so questions a day that are shot at him:

"I've told all four of them to be ready. And believe me they will be ready, too. I'll pick the one that looks best next Tuesday, and after that we will work a rotation just as we have all season."

HARRIS FAVORS GIANTS

DETROIT, Sept. 27. — (INS.) — Bucky Harris' name today was added to the list of American Leaguers who select the New York Giants to beat the Washington Senators in the world series. Harris, recently resigned pilot of the Detroit Tigers and manager of the Senators team which beat the Giants in the 1924 series, favors the New Yorkers because of their superior pitching.

Wales, Personal Pro Upset In Golf Match

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales and his personal professional, Archie Compston, yesterday were defeated in a four ball match at St. Andrews by the St. Andrews' professional, Laurie Ayton and Lord Castlerosse.

Ayton, who returned to St. Andrews last year after 13 years with a suburban Chicago club shortly will leave St. Andrews to accept the job of professional at South Shields.

WRITERS DEFY LANDIS ON SCORING

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Baseball Commissioner Landis' right to appoint official scorers has been challenged by the Chicago Chapter of the National Baseball Writers' Association.

Commissioner Landis appointed James Cruisenbery and Harry Neily, as official scorers for the city series between the Whitesox and Cubs.

The Chicago writers held a meeting yesterday and named Herb Simons and Eddie Munzel, sports writers. It was decided to appoint a committee of three to ask Commissioner Landis to rescind his selections. If he doesn't, the writers will abide only by the decisions of Simons and Munzel.

Los Angeles Wins Flag, Record Tied

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—The Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast Baseball League today had won the pennant by defeating the San Francisco Seals, 9 to 6.

Frank Shellenback tied the all-time Coast League pitching record when he won the 261st game of his career by pitching the Hollywood Stars to a 10-to-6 victory over the San Francisco Missions. Spider Baum won 261 games over a 17-year-period. Shellenback has been in the league 13 years.

BUCS CONTINUE BARNSTORMING PLAY TODAY

The Pirate barnstormers are doing their stuff in New Bethlehem today. Tomorrow will be a rest day, the big leaguers show before the fans of Fairmont, W. Va., Friday.

It was circus day in Greenville yesterday as the Mercer County town entertained the Pirates. The Buccos won 3 to 0, but the upstate lads showed the big show performers a neat brand of baseball.

A feature of the game was the high class performance given on the slab by John Conley, of Duquesne, who starred for the Springfield, O., club of the Mid-Atlantic League this year. Only 20, Conley is a big righthander of much promise. He went to the mound after Larry French and Ralph Birkofer had sufficient work. George Bortz, 20-year-old lefthander, held the Buccos to seven hits.

Hughey Tate, a famous slugger of the Greater Pittsburgh district for many years, and now a resident of Greenville, officiated as umpire-in-chief.

Honus Wagner was the feature attraction of the day. About 2,500 fans saw the game. The score:

Boise Advances In Pro Tourney

RYE, N. Y., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Justifying their selections as the top seeded players, Vincent Richards and Francis T. Hunter, led a parade of the favorites through the opening rounds in the seventh annual professional tennis championships at the Westchester Country Club.

Richards, ranked No. 1 in the absence of Bill Tilden, yesterday swept into the third round with a straight set defeat of Benjamin M. Levin, after drawing a bye in the first round. The scores were 6-1, 6-4, 6-3.

The field of 30 was reduced to 28 when Karl Kozeluh, of Czechoslovakia, twice holder of the title, and Hans Nusslein, young German star, failed to arrive in this country in time to compete. As the result Julius Boise, of Sewickley, Pa., who was scheduled to play Kozeluh, moved into the third round.

Rich Races Carded For Weirton Track

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 27—Highdowns, the new racing plant being constructed at Weirton, on the Ohio River, will have stake events with a total value of $175,000 during the racing season of 1934, according to Samuel E. Chilton, Charleston lawyer and president of the West Virginia Jockey Club, the corporation that is building and financing the plant.

It is planned to hold a 50-day race meet, starting about June 1, on the new course. Of the special events planned, three will be stakes with a value of $25,000 each, five will be stakes with a value of $10,000 each and ten will be stakes with a value of $5,000 each.

Zuppke Enthused Over Illinois Team

CLEVELAND, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Enthusiasm for the 1933 edition of the University of Illinois football team was expressed in a speech here yesterday by Bob Zuppke, Illini grid mentor.

Speaking at a Chamber of Commerce football luncheon to arouse interest in the Army-Illinois game here October 19, Zuppke predicted the game would be a toss up, but added the Illini would be in there fighting every minute.

He said his team this year would be bigger than the average Illinois team and his sophomores had gained valuable experience.

N. CASTLE OUT TO INCREASE WIN STREAK

By JULIUS LEVIN

The New Castle High School football team, co-champion in class AA of the W. P. I. A. L. in 1932, will be striving for its fourteenth successive victory Friday night when the Scarlet Hurricane clashes with the Charleroi Cougars in the first double A contest of the season.

The Lawrence countians were undefeated in 11 straight games last season, including a post-season battle with McKeesport High, which also shared in the double A championship.

New Castle will take the field a favorite to defeat the Stepanian-coached gridders. Walter Kominic, all-scholastic fullback of 1932, has recovered from injuries and is reported in fine shape for the contest.

The Lawrence County contenders for the class AA title have kept their goal line clear of all opponents in their last four games, blanking Turtle Creek Union and McKeesport in their final two games in 1932 and whitewashing Braddock and Ellwood City in their first two frays of this season.

New Castle, while it lost a lot of material, still has a number of veterans available for the championship race. The two Shellogg boys are back on the line, and they compare with the best in district scholastic circles.

PANTHER COACH MAY SELECT LINEUP TODAY

H. Harpster Spins a Tale About a Coach

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach; All-American Quarterback, 1928. (Written with Apologies to Mark Hellinger)

This coaching business isn't all milk and honey and glamour. And sometimes, I am sure, my brother coaches become discouraged with their lot and feel they're unappreciated and wonder if it's all worth while. For instance:

Howard Harpster

There was the coach who, after his team had lost its sixth game in a row, called his men together and read the riot act to them.

Turning to a big, lanky end named Jim, his voice boomed with sarcasm and disgust:

"In my time, I have seen a great many examples of how the position of end should not be played, but, Jim, your exhibition on Saturday without doubt was the worst ever given by a member of an Upton team. The way you failed to move across that scrimmage line was a perfect imitation of Sitting Bull in action. Did you think those ball carriers were going to run into your arms just because you stood there and held them out?"

Then continuing:

"Ah—the quarterback!

"And, Wilson, if you're a halfback, then this team will be invited to play in the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day. That ball of which you had hold the few times you didn't fumble was blown up, not stuffed, yet the way it dribbled along the ground on your kicks made me believe for a while it was filled with lead. We lost 20 yards on every exchange of kicks."

Up and down the line went the coach, flaying each man with his sarcastic rage. Finally his eye came to rest on the quarterback, and his fury grew in intensity. He strode up to where the signal-caller sat, and as he glowered down upon him he yelled in anything but a humane voice:

"Now, let's see, Joe, what position do you play on this splendid team of ours? Oh, yes, you're the quarterback, the fellow who calls the plays and runs the team. And didn't I read in the papers before the season opened that you were the brains of this year's squad? That's it, that's what is the matter with this team—it's brainless."

A SORRY PLIGHT

"Joe, as I look over Saturday's game, I can't recall a single play you called that wasn't wrong. You ran the ends when you should have hit the line, and you hit the line when you should have passed. Your selection of plays on the only occasion that we were in scoring position was stupid. I didn't know one person could be so dumb and still be at liberty.

"I wonder what ever will become of you, Joe. You are too dumb to be a quarterback. Last Friday, the dean told me that you had flunked all of your exams, and that he is going to kick you out of college. You are too stupid to get a job, and there is no chance for you to marry a wealthy girl. What are you going to do, anyway?"

THE HAPPY SOLUTION

After a few moments' hesitation, Joe looked up and said:

"Well coach, what you say is true, and it has been bothering me a great deal lately. However, I have given the matter some very serious consideration, and, after looking at it from all angles, have come to the conclusion that I will take up coaching."

SIX POSITIONS ON VARSITY ARE SET

By JESS CARVER

Coach Jock Sutherland is due to come out of a huddle with himself today (tomorrow at the latest) and pick a starting lineup for the Panthers' opening game of the season Saturday against Wash-Jeff. Right now, unless he has a setup tucked away in a remote corner of his mind, the good Doctor still is guessing.

Pitt will have to have a combination able to click to get by the opener this year. Wash-Jeff likely will take a licking, but the Presidents will be no foe with which to fool. They'll come to Pittsburgh for something beside the bus ride and their share of the gate.

SIX JOBS SET

At present, only six positions definitely are settled on the Pitt varsity. Muggsy Skladany is certain to be at end, with Walton and Meredith at the tackles; Onder and Hartwig at guards and Shotwell at center.

Verne Baxter appears to have a swell chance to get the first call at the other terminal. If he does, he'll be the only sophomore to start. The choice being between he and Harvey Rooker.

In the beckfield, Bob Hogan appears to be a slight edge over Miller Munjas, an edge about the size of a Republican's contribution to the Democrats' campaign fund. Nicksick and O'Dell are neck and neck at left halfback, with Sebastian hard pressed for the other position by Dick Matesic. Izzy Weinstock has only a shadow over Dutch Weisenbaugh at fullback.

TO STRESS ATTACK

The Panthers, by the way, are to depend mainly on their attack this fall. The quarterback will be instructed to keep possession of the ball and to go out after touchdowns, and what is more, to secure 'em in the easiest way. The old goal-line stands are out. Jock wants enough points so that if the other lads want to tally a few, it will be o. k. with Pitt.

Among the folks who will be glad when the Duquesne-West Virginia game, due to be played here Friday night unless someone steals Forbes Field in the meantime, is over, is Mrs. Elmer Layden. Mrs. Layden has the heebie-jeebies because Elmer isn't eating as he should, and for a little gent, or a comparatively little gent, Elmer usually has a voracious appetite.

Among Elmer's worries concerning the game with West Virginia is the fact that his Dukes are going to enter the contest with even choices to take the Mountaineers. This situation arose about 5:30 o'clock last Saturday afternoon when Wash-Lee tied the West Virginians. If West Virginia had walloped the Generals, or even defeated them by a fair margin, it would have been much better for the locals.

BACKFIELD PROBLEM

About the only mechanical worry on the Layden mind is that concerning his backfield. He isn't certain just what to do with his backs. Here he is with three crack right halfbacks and only one for the other job. That one, Al DeLuca, is quite a one, but still, you have to have more than one man for each position to get by in the big leagues now a'days.

So it looks very much as if Jim McDonald would be shifted back to left half, with Art Strutt and Jim Fillingham alternating at the other halfback and Zaninelli and Zaneski working out as fullbacks. DeCoster, Gates and Cutrona rate the quarterback calls in that order.

W.-J. LINEUP SET

Carrier pigeon Princess Hohenzollern Camelia Equipoise Clancy (and a bonnie bird she is, too) fluttered in with the latest reports on the doings of the Presidents and Mountaineers. The data on Wash-Jeff has it that Coach Hank Day is set on his lineup. He'll have a veteran line, made up of Headley and Fife at the terminals; Dalrymple and Melenyzer at the tackles; Bubenheim and Massock at the guards, and Gray at center. Behind these seven will be a backfield composed of two sophomores at the halves, Reed and Wilson; a made-over lineman, Nick Isaac, at quarterback, and Eddie Meyers at fullback.

Greasy Neale is reported planning to start the same team against the Dukes as staggered through the game with Wash-Lee, save that Eck Allen will be available for quarterbacking duty.

The Waynesburg-Grove City game, originally scheduled for Grove City on Armistice Day, has been shifted to Brownsville and will be staged as a feature of the Fayette County American Legion Armistice Day celebration.

FORMER BUC TO COACH

CHICAGO, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Kyle Anderson, of Terre Haute, Ind., has been appointed head baseball coach at the University of Chicago. He played football and baseball on U. of C. teams in 1925, 1926 and 1927. The Pittsburgh Pirates signed Anderson in 1928 and later sent him to the American Association.

ALL OTHER POSITIONS PRODUCE VICTORS

You could round out a complete team with the other playing managers who won pennants in the big leagues, as championships have been won by active pilots who performed in all of the remaining positions. Among the successful playing managers were one catcher, two pitchers, two second basemen, one third baseman and three outfielders.

Bill Carrigan, Red Sox chief in the winning seasons of 1915-16, was a catcher; A. G. Spalding, Chicago Nationals in 1876, and Clark Griffith, Chicago Americans in 1901, were pitchers; Bucky Harris played second base for his victorious Senators in 1924-25, and Rogers Hornsby covered the same position for the Cardinals in 1926; Jimmy Collins took care of third base for the Red Sox in 1903-04, while Fred Clarke, who won with the Pirates in 1901-02-03-09, Fielder Jones, of the White Sox in 1906, and Tris Speaker, of the Indians, in 1920, all played in the outfield.

WEIGHT OF FOOTBALL EQUIPMENT REDUCED

After a long study of ways and means to reduce the weight of the equipment worn by football players, Coach Noble Kizer, of Purdue University, this fall will have his gridders attired in suits specially designed by himself which will weigh less than 10 pounds, including shoes and headgear. And every article in the outfit is rainproof, so as not to absorb moisture on wet days and become heavier.

Noble Kizer

It's a big job, this matter of equipping football players. Consider, for example, one of the largest camps in the country, that at the University of Southern California, home of the national champions, where Johnny Lehners has charge of that department. There are 60 varsity players at U. S. C., and each of them has two shirts, two pairs of pants and three pairs of shoes, not to mention headgears, miscellaneous shirts, socks and all kinds of trick bandages and other equipment.

SATIN GRID PANTS MADE MORE DURABLE

Troy's varsity men have red sweaters to wear when they are the home team, and white sweaters when they are visiting, together with satin pants for all games, and a pair of ordinary football pants to wear when the squad is only practicing. Satin pants have been improved greatly in quality. They used to rip with practically no encouragement, and was the wearer's face red? But they're made better now and are more durable. Their chief advantage is that they are slippery and hard for tacklers to hold.

In addition to the 60 men on the varsity squad, there are about 200 other gridders at Southern California to be outfitted—second squad members, Spartans and freshmen. They get last year's varsity suits and equipment, all of which must be reconditioned and fixed up. Something like 100 pairs of woolen socks and 400 pairs of cotton socks must be provided. And it takes roughly 1,800 towels per week to dry off the physiques of the mighty men of Troy. A huge job has Lehners, and the duties of the men working in a similar capacity at the major schools in Pittsburgh and elsewhere throughout the country are correspondingly heavy.

TEST FOR BOTH SHARKEY AND LOUGHRAN

In Pennsylvania's first legalized 15-round fight, in Philadelphia tonight, Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, is in the position of seeking to regain the prestige he lost, if he had any, in the Levinsky disaster, and Tommy Loughran tries to re-establish himself in the front ranks.

Tommy Loughran

In view of his poor exhibition against Levinsky, Sharkey would appear to be in for another defeat, even though Loughran has seen his best days, but you can never figure the former sailor, as he is just as likely as not to turn right around and repeat the licking he gave Tommy four years ago. It won't mean a lot either way.

Another return bout scheduled for tonight and then postponed to Saturday and then canceled would have brought together Billy Petrolle and Bep Van Klaveren. The match is off because Van Klaveren has suffered the reopening of the eye cut which caused the stopping of their Polo Grounds clash some time ago.

DOYLE PICKS N. Y. GIANTS

Apparently there are some critics who feel that the longer the strife the better chance for Cronin's crew. This argument appears strong at first blush, if one is to concede that the Senators are potentially stronger than the Giants, but when it is considered that in the event of a seven-game argument the last two battles will swing the action back to the Polo Grounds, the endurance angle loses some of its weight.

In other words, the percentage in the impending clashes seems to rest with the Giants. The Senators could change all of this by shellacking Ace Hubbell in the opener, but such an eventuality would be more of a surprise than anything else. Hubbell is drubbed only on rare occasions.

School Gridders Collide, One Dies

CHESTER, W. Va., Sept. 27.—(AP.)—One high school football player is dead and another is undergoing examination as the result of a collision during a scrimmage.

Daniel J. Rodden, Jr., 16, died in a hospital late last night. A member of the Eddystone High School squad, he collided yesterday with Harry Shellender, St. Roberts High School player. Both were knocked unconscious, but were sent home after emergency treatment. Rodden, however, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage.

Polo Grounders Can't Even Play Polo—Altrock

By NICK ALTROCK

Coach of the Washington Senators

Well, friends, we are on the brink of another world series, and the question is, who gets pushed off, the Nats or the Giants? First, I will get out my test tubes and retorts and litmus paper and analyze our Washington club. And, after an unbiased dissection, I will show why the Giants can't win.

Our first break of the series is that we will open in New York. Playing under National League rules, which give visitors their choice of weapons, we will demand that the first two games at the Polo Grounds be decided by playing polo. And that's where we've got 'em!

Nick Altrock

There isn't a Giant that can ride a pony. On the other hand, six of our Washington players are as much at home in a saddle as they are in a Morris chair, nine of them are ex-cowboys, four of 'em have been practicing on merry-go-rounds and all of us sleep on blankets.

BRAIN TRUST WILL HELP

So, after we have the first two games in the feed bag we move on to our Washington park for the other pastimes. President Roosevelt will come into the stands on a zinc pass. We gave him a gold one at the start of the season, but he gave it to the Treasury Department to melt into bullion. Oh, well!

Surrounding the President will be the Brain Trust, except Prof. Moley, who will be up in the press box keeping a scorecard for his new magazine. If our club doesn't get its bats going, I will give the Elks' sign to the Brain Trust and they will call for inflation. That means the Giants' pitchers will have to blow up at once or be very unpatriotic.

On the other hand, if the Giants start bopping our hurlers, I will give the Moose sign of distress to the Brain Trust, and they will slap an embargo on exporting horsehides outside the infield. So the Giants will surely lose out, but at the end of the game they will get a Blue Eagle.

HAS HUBBELL STOPPED

I don't see how they're going to cop a single match. Some of the dizzier experts pick the Giants on account of their flinging staff, I know. I admit their Four Horsehide Men are pretty good, but we have got the hex on them, too.

A month ago, I got out my tool chest and analyzed Carl Hubbell's screw ball. I found out he chucks it with a snap of his wrist, and that's all I want to know. The day Hubbell is due to pitch against us I have rounded up a bunch of breadliners and just before the game they will tramp out on the field and say they are some admirers from his old home town of Hohokus, and won't he kindly accept this writch watch as a token of their esteem. The wrist watch will consist of an Ingersoll inlaid in a leather strap two inches wide.

GIANTS CAN'T WIN

Well, Hubbell naturally won't want to offend his admirers by not wearing the wrist watch in the game—and then just watch him try to snap that screw ball at our batters. He'll be liable to murl the agate over the Jersey palisades.

The second time Hubbell comes up to pitch against us, I have fixed it for his admirers to present him a bracelet of barbed wire.

CASEY WRITES:

EDDIE DEFENDS GRID 'SETUP' CONTESTS

By EDDIE CASEY,
Member, All-America Board of Football. (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.)

This week-end will find many of the college teams of the country in their first game of the season. For the majority it will be hardly more than a practice scrimmage, and we may expect to find many large scores. But these preliminary games really are of great help to coaches, no matter how one-sided they may be.

Eddie Casey.

In the first place, a coach gets a general idea of his offense. He can judge to some extent if the timing in his plays is right, he can tell whether the positions of his players need slight changes. Then, if his team is developed enough to try some of the deceptive plays, it also is evident whether they are good enough to fool the defense. It usually happens that after the first game or two the coaches discard some of their theoretically good plays and add a few simple ones that are sure-fire.

MANY PLAYES TESTED

Of great help in early games is the opportunity to use a lot of players. A squad can scrimmage in its practice sessions continually and not find conditions similar to a game. It is in a game that the coach finds whether the candidates for the team have real football instinct. It is here that he finds whether their reactions are correct.

On every squad in the country, there are numbers of likely looking freshmen who are coming into varsity games for the first time. And it is in the early games that they get the needed experience for the big games to come. Many a practice star will be found to be a wash-out when it comes to the games. And what a help it is to the coach, to find this out before some important game.

It has happened that some untried youngster sent into a big game has been responsible for defeat because the coach did not know his capabilities.

EMPHASIS ON BLOCKING

Usually the early games are to try out plays, and the passing and kicking game is sidetracked for a later date. The emphasis is put on blocking and the opening of holes. It is of the utmost importance to get the strong plays of the offense rolling. And in this respect, early games are a big help. It gives a team confidence in its offense, and this is of major importance to any squad.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27. — Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight champion, and Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia's ring idol, renew their four-year-old feud in Philadelphia's National League park tonight when they will travel 15 rounds under the new state law.

The Boston sailor knocked out Loughran four years ago, but since then he has gone back and recently, in Chicago, was defeated by King Levinsky. He will enter the ring weighing about 200 pounds, more than 10 pounds heavier than his opponent.

About 18,000 fans were expected to attend, with the gate reaching between $45,000 and $50,000. Sharkey will receive a $25,000 guarantee.

WOMEN GOLF STARS WIN

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Sept. 27. —(AP.)—Frances Williams, of Allentown, and Edith Quier, of Reading, ranking qualifiers and favorites in the Pennsylvania women's golf championship tournament, brushed aside opponents today to enter the semi-final round.

The Allentown girl was at the top of her game in overwhelming Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former national champion from Merion, 6 and 4. Miss Quier, dominant figure of the tourney, rallied on the back nine to defeat Mrs. Conyers Button, of Philadelphia, 4 and 2.

Surviving quarter-final play with them was Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck, of Philadelphia, national champion 18 years ago, who easily defeated Mrs. J. Walker Hoopes, of Kennett Square, 6 and 4.

Miss Vanderbeck and Miss Quier clash in the upper bracket semi-final tomorrow. Miss Williams meets the winner of the match between Mrs. John L. Welsh, of Bridgeport, and Eleanor Wilson, of Wallingford, which was all square at the turn.

Miss Betty Abernathy and Mrs. Frank Campbell, the only two qualifiers from Pittsburgh, were defeated in the first round yesterday. Miss Abernathy los to Mrs. Welsh, 3 and 2, and Mrs. Campbell losing to Mrs. Vanderbeck, 5 and 4.

BOBBY JONES' GOLF

By BOBBY JONES

Only Golfer Who Has Won U. S. and British Amateur and Open Championships in the Same Year.

Looking back to the amateur championship, I think that the most impressive single factor in George Dunlap's triumph was his ability to bring off a saving or conclusive shot every time he found himself in a tight place. From a mechanical standpoint, of course, his magnificent round on Saturday morning was the feature of the tournament. But he never would have had a chance to play that round had he not earlier in the week proved himself a great competitor by pulling out of some very tight holes.

Bobby Jones

Consider the qualifying rounds. In the first one he played well enough and putted beautifully. In the second his putting went haywire for the only time during the week. Finally, he was left with a 20-footer on the last green to get in the playoff. He knew he had to hole it, and he must have felt some mistrust of his putter after the day it had given him. Nevertheless, the putt went down.

BEST UNDER PRESSURE

Against Gus Moreland, in the middle of the round, when the going was close, he saved or won four holes in succession with fine chips or close putts, and then went on to win easily. And against Little, there were two points which I judged to be critical and in each case it was Dunlap who delivered.

The first came at the seventeenth of the morning round. Both had holed good putts for a half in par at the sixteenth to keep the match even. It looked like a break either way at this stage would be important. Dunlap hit two good shots down the fairway of the long seventeenth, but he was far behind Little's two booming woods, the last of which had finished in a bunker quite near the green. Dunlap then cut his pitch badly into a bunker on the right of the green, and Little played out 20 feet from the hole. When Dunlaps' out from the bunker finished 25 feet beyond the hole, he was in a tough spot. Farther away in 4 than Little was in 3, it semed as if he must go to lunch at least 1 down. But he struck the putt beautifully and down it went. And when another 20-footer dropped on the last green, he retired with a lead of one hole which might just as well have been a like deficit.

HIS GREATEST SHOT

Again, playing the fourth hole in the afternoon, he had added one to his lead, but Little was fighting hard. The California youngstr had left him far behind off this tee, and Dunlap found his ball lying in the mark made in the rain-soaked turf by the heel af a lady's shoe. Here he played what probably was the greatest shot of the tournament. Taking a No. 4 iron, he banged his ball 175 yards, six feet from the hole. He won this hole when Little's second was wide, and the next by dropping an eight-footer for a 2. This magnificent response to the challenge of the situation put him in complete command of the match.

Dunlap's 68 in the morning round of the final left him little need for heroics. In this round, he was off the fairway only once from the tee, and he hit every green in the proper number of shots. But only a real competitor would be likely to produce such a round in the final of a championship.

There are a great many golfers who can play the shots when the going is easy or the stake is unimportant. But the man who habitually rises to the occasion with a difficult putt or a great iron shot at a crucial moment is a hard man to beat.

Business Man And a Banker Discuss Loan

By B. C. FORBES

NOBODY WANTS the price of everything to be fixed by the government. That would kill initiative, fill business life with monotony, arrest the nation's progress, and stifle America's ability to retain America's pre-eminence in the world.

Mr. Forbes

Didn't President Roosevelt this week summons steel leaders and ask them to submit competitive bids for rails, for years maintained at a uniform price by all manufacturers?

IT IS undeniable that many lines of business—and many workers—have suffered acutely during recent years because of unjustified, iniquitous, ruinous price-cutting.

Among legitimate concerns, differences of opinion which have arisen are in regard to how far price-fixing should go and should not go. Such differences are entirely natural.

ONE READER, a large industrial employer, President George P. Torrence, of the Link-Belt Company, emphasizing the importance of providing for fair prices under NRA codes, sends me the following dialogue between "a business man, who needs money for his payroll and additional material, and his banker, whom he asks for a loan":

Banker: "Are you working under an NRA code?"

Borrower: "Yes."

Banker: "Does your code control the wages and hours of your employes?"

Borrower: "Yes."

Banker: "Does it also provide a means so that you will get a fair price for the goods you sell?"

Borrower: "No. Price control provisions were omitted from the code."

Banker: "Are you likely to make a profit?"

Borrower: "No. Since there is no control of prices and much idle capacity, prices in our business will be probably below cost."

Banker: "I am sorry, but I am unable to lend you my depositors' money, for which I am trustee, since it seems improbable that you will be able to repay it."

MR. TORRENCE adds:

"Suppose the conversation had been:

Borrower: "Yes. Our business code provides a simple open price association, and our business is under the control of an executive committee of the leaders in our industry who know it very well and are conscientiously aiding me and all others in the industry in setting prices that are fair."

Banker: "Will you make a profit?"

Borrower: "Yes, with fair prices prevalent in our industry, we expect to make a modest profit if our business volume continues as at present."

Banker: "I am justified in lending my depositors' money to you since you will probably be in a position to repay it."

CERTAIN IT is that creating of conditions which will make bankers feel safe in lending normally to business is of urgent importance.

POWER OUTPUT GAIN LESS

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Production of electricity by the electric light and power industry in the United States during the week ended September 23 was 1,638,757,000 kwh as against 1,490,863,000 kwh in the like 1932 week, an increase of 9.9 per cent, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

Output in the week ended September 16 showed an increase of 12.7 per cent, and in the week ended September 9 was 11.1 per cent ahead of the like 1932 period.

Gold Price Lower.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—(INS.)—Today's selling price of gold at the Federal Reserve banks was fixed by the Treasury at $31.35, against $31.49 yesterday.

PUBLIC WORKS BUOYS STEEL MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Iron Age says:

"The launching of a government-sponsored capital goods program, the speeding up of public works and a renewed wave of steel buying set in motion by price advances have put new life into a flagging market. At the same time the downward trend in steel production is less pronounced with a rise of two points to 46 per cent of capacity at Chicago partially offsetting three-point declines to 29 per cent at Pittsburgh and to 72 per cent in the Wheeling district. The national average of ingot output at 41 per cent is identical with the rate of a fortnight ago and two points lower than the figure of last week.

FORWARD BUYING

"The chief disturbing feature in the iron and steel outlook is the fact that the continued upward movement of prices forced by rising costs has driven in business considerably in excess of consumers' current needs. Even the steel fabricating trade which had long religiously restricted its purchases to steel requirements for specific projects, is now purchasing for stock.

"The greatest current impetus to steel demand has been supplied by advances of $2 a ton on plates and shapes and $30 a ton on bars for the fourth quarter which become effective October 1.

SCRAP WEAKENS

"Scrap shows further weakness throughout the country and price declines at Chicago and Philadelphia have reduced the Iron Age composite for heavy melting steel from $11.17 to $11.04 a gross ton, the fourth consecutive reduction since the last week in August. Notwithstanding this unfavorable augury, the trend of prices in other primary materials seems to be definitely upward. The composite price for pig iron is unchanged at $16.71 a gross ton, but the finished steel composite has risen from 1.979c to 1.992c a pound, with a further advance due next week when fourth-quarter prices on heavy rolled products go into effect.

Natural Gas Tax Demand Predicted

WASHINGTON, Sept. 27.—Demand for equalization tax on natural gas to control the competition with bituminous coal will be asked at the next session of Congress, NRA officials predict.

Cut in Deficit Comforts Anti-Inflationists

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—(AP.)—Those conservative bankers and economists who have been afflicted with a sort of inflation phobia, are now taking some real comfort in the government's improved fiscal position.

Those wholly uncontrolled inflations which have torn through several countries at various times in the past, have almost all resulted from inability of government revenues to catch up with government expenditures.

As deficits widened the government's credit vanished and there was finally no recourse save the printing press. That was the situation which led to our issue of Civil War greenbacks. And that was the Nemesis of the old German mark.

But the sharp reduction of our federal deficit in recent months has depicted a nation in control of its finances, and with such control in the saddle, proponents of inflation argue, a restricted and salutory inflation should be possible. Nevertheless, it is acknowledged that inflationary steps must be taken with care, if the market for government bonds is not to be harmed. The dip in gilt-edged securities a few days ago, when inflation-minded Senators were making known their views in Washington, was indicated by conservatives as significant. If the government intends to refund any substantial part of its indebtedness, Wall street authorities say, it is apparent that it must handle the inflational problem skillfully.

The federal governments financial statement for the period of July 1 to September 16, makes reassuring reading, compared to the preceding record. Receipts exceeded those of a year previously by $212,000,000, while expenditures were $271,000,000 less. As a result, the deficit for the fiscal year which started July 1 was on September 16 only $229,000,000, compared with $712,000,000 in the like period of last year.

The government's huge public works program, however, will require considerable financing as it progresses. The public debt on September 16 was $23,061,000,000, which, while about $6,876,000,000 above the total at the end of the 1929-30 fiscal year, was still $3,536,000,000 below the post-war peak reached in 1919.

STOCK MARKET PRICES TAKE TUMBLE

NEW YORK, Sept. 27. — The deflation of inflationary speculative enthusiasm gave security markets a bearish tinge today and many disheartened traders liquidated their holdings at sharp price recessions.

There was little actual news that might have accounted for a resumption of the downward swing which carried numerous stocks to their lowest levels of the past several weeks. Various brokers were inclined to attribute the fresh weakness of equities to growing uncertainties regarding monetary stabilization. Grains were heavy and cotton easier. Other commodities were rather soft.

Secondary bonds sagged, but prime investment issues and United States government securities were comparatively steady. The dollar again exhibited strength in foreign exchange dealings.

Utility shares generally showed some resistance to selling pressure, but there was little support for other groups. Issues off 1 to 4 or more points at one time included Allied Chemical, American Can, American Telephone, Case, Chrysler, du Pont, United States Steel, General Motors, Westinghouse, United Aircraft, Industrial Rayon, Western Union, National Distillers, United States Industrial Alcohol, American Commercial Alcohol, Seaboard Oil, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, New York Central, United States Smelting, Homestake Mining, American Smelting and Alaska Juneau.

While banking circles were confident that some sort of clarification of the government's fiscal policies might be expected from Washington at any time, market observers were not so certain that an administrative statement was imminent.

In some quarters it was felt that a currency stabilization decision would be postponed at least until after the conference with English representatives on war debts early next month. It was believed that the matter of pound-dollar stabilization might come up at this conference.

The recent depreciation of the dollar to below 64 cents in terms of gold, trade analysts point out, apparently has not resulted in any great stimulation of American exports. In August, it was recalled, the unfavorable trade balance of the United States amounted to some $24,000,000, which was contra-seasonal.

Among reasons advanced for this somewhat contradictory situation are that, under existing conditions, a large part of international business is of a necessitous character and relatively stable; that other currencies have accompanied the dollar on the downhill push, and that tariffs and quotas in many cases have tended to offset the sharp declines in currency values.

COAST ACTIVITY AGAIN MOVES FORWARD

By MERRYLE RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—After a pause, coast economic activity has again started to move definitely forward. This fact is confirmed in the principal statistical indicators.

Mr. Rukeyser

As a matter of fact, the fluctuations since the low point have not been as large as in the industrial East. Furthermore, there is a lag of at least four months out here. That is accounted for by the fact that the coast supplies semi-luxury products to the rest of the country, and in due course reflects changes in the purchasing power of its customers.

Though business in the large out here is still in the subnormal zone and the demand for credit is still small, leading bankers report distinct improvement in the position of representative enterprises.

I asked Herbert Fleischhacker, president of the Anglo-California Bank, what is needed to give greater vitality to the business situation out here.

FAITH HELD NEED

Without hesitation, he replied:

"Only confidence. We need more faith. At the moment there is too much disposition to question the wisdom of economic policies instead of co-operating whole heartedly to make them a success. I think some have overlooked the constructive side of the NRA, with its provisions for trade agreements and the outlawing of price cutting."

The raising of the dollar price of gold has started a new gold rush out here—both marketwise and in the fields.

In the San Francisco Curb, there has been exciting speculation in the Penny gold stocks, which have had an immense percentage rise. The theory is that the new price of gold will make it profitable to work hitherto discarded submarginal mines.

WORK FOR THOUSANDS

Bankers predict that tens of thousands of additional men will be absorbed in various forms of gold mining activity. Already there has been a substantial migration of hopefuls to prospective gold lands.

The gold rush and the entrance of well-known eastern speculators into the Notomas Company, a farming and gold mining property, has made that stock a sensation on the local exchange. The company mines gold by the modern dredging process which entails the principles of mass production. A dredge costs $350,000.

Tom McCormick, the president, in chatting with me, revealed that the company is about to purchase and install a new dredge to take advantage of the new opportunity to mine less accessible gold profitably.

He said:

"The price of gold before was too low. The effect of the new price will be greatly to add to the annual production of gold in the United States by making it profitable to go after gold which is more difficult to get. In addition large numbers of additional men will be called on to work."

'BUY' AIDS STORES

A leading banker here said he thought the "Buy in September" campaign had been effective because it stressed buying what you actually need.

Grove Magnin, head of a chain of high-grade special shops throughout the state, told me that there had been a striking pickup in retail buying in the last four months. Sales had been restricted by the lack of inventory. Strikes in the East had shut off the flow of desirable merchandise. Incidentally, the merchant said that all through the depression the demand for fine merchandise was greater than the supply. Because so many frightened manufacturers turned to cheaper merchandise, he said, stores were forced unnecessarily to bring down their price lines.

Gasoline Supply Shows Increase

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Domestic crude oil production during the week ended September 23 averaged 2,487,000 barrels daily, a decline of 116,450 barrels daily from the week preceding, according to the American Petroleum Institute.

Gasoline stocks during the week increased by 323,000 barrels, totaling 49,944,000 barrels on September 23.

Gasoline Reduced At Houston, Texas

HOUSTON, Sept. 27.—The Humble Oil and Refining Company and other major marketers have reduced the price of gasoline 1 cent a gallon in Houston. The cut does not apply to third-grade gas.

It is understood the reduction was made to check the flood of gasoline originating at small refineries in East Texas.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 27.—The market was due 1⅛d to 1⅛d lower. Opened ½d to ¾d off, and at 12:15 p. m. was down ¾d to ⅞d.

Penthouse

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

But in the living room in the drawer of a table he found a gun, a thirty-eight. He picked it up, broke it and saw that all the chambers were loaded. He squinted down the barrel, but it was clean. He nodded grimly and placed the weapon back in the drawer. Swiftly, with minute care, he combed the room and found nothing. Then he walked to the window and stared down at Crelliman's penthouse. He pointed his hand at the roof, shrugged his shoulders slightly, and sat down in a chair by the window.

The penthouse was lighted brightly. Inside it, with the man who had caused the death of Mimi Montagne and cunningly arranged that Tom Siddall would be charged with the murder, was Tom Siddall's fiancee, the one-time fiancee of Durant.

Now, what was that all about? Sue had come to him and begged him, her former lover, to save her present lover. Then, shortly after threats against her, she had disappeared from her home, alarming her father as well as Durant. She had returned to lie to her father and to dismiss Durant contemptuously from the case. And now she was in the penthouse with Jim Crelliman.

Strange Actions

He would have been enraged except that curiosity was stronger than any emotion. Why? All his life mysteries had attracted him. He had never been able to accept anything as fact because wiser people told him the thing was fact. He always wanted the truth demonstrated, not revealed to him.

What was Sue doing with Crelliman?

As he stared down at the building on the roof a door opened and he knew the immediate answer to his question. She was emerging from the apartment to the porch. Crelliman, bulking large beside her, was obviously showing her his home. He was doing more than that. He was demonstrating to her how Mimi Montagne had died.

For Sue was standing about where Mimi had stood, if the newspaper diagrams of the killing were correct. She was facing the Oklahoma Building. If she raised her eyes she would be staring right at the window where Durant sat. And with a rebirth of the caution which he had abandoned in the last few moments, he switched off the light and resumed his seat at the window.

Not too soon, either. Sue, while Crelliman talked to her, was looking upward now. Had she done this a moment ago Durant would have been framed in the window, made visible by the light behind him. Even as it was he turned his head, smiling as he did so at the absurdity of the action. She was in the light of the penthouse porch; she couldn't possibly distinguish the features of a person shadowed in darkness.

Hard to Understand

Now he saw Crelliman put his right hand in his pocket, withdraw it and point it at the girl. Then, as though they had completed the rehearsal of a scene, the two turned back into the apartment.

Now, what the devil was all this? Sue knew that Siddall hadn't killed the Montagne girl. Then why did she enact a part in a dramatization of the killing—a dramatization in which she was Mimi Montagne and Crelliman was obviously Tom Siddall?

Could it be possible that Sue's faith in the man she loved was so weak that it could be broken down by the word of a man like Crelliman? Crelliman was one of those whose testimony had made the police arrest Siddall. Did a woman who loved a man accept proof of that man's villainy from another man who had reason to hate the lover? Sue knew that Siddall had had an affair with Mimi Montagne. She knew that Crelliman had had an affair with her. Would she let Crelliman who, to put it mildly, might have been annoyed with Siddall, convince her that Siddall was a murderer?

Yet that was what the demonstration on the porch looked like. What sort of person was Sue. He visualized her blonde fluffiness, the daintiness which he had adored. Had he, who prided himself on his ability to read character, been completely fooled about Sue?

Perhaps he had. Perhaps her exquisite femininity of face and body had blinded him to the hardness of her soul. Certainly, in her relations with himself, there had been nothing yielding. She had professed to love him; she had given him her lips and her arms; she had whispered to him that she adored him. But because he chose to let his career 'ranch away from what she considered its destined direction she had jilted him. Jilted him ruthlessly, he suddenly decided.

That was it. She was ruthless. Funny he hadn't thought this before. He had thought that she was merely weak, not strong enough to brave the censure of her set by the side of the man she loved. He had looked upon her as something so gentle that she couldn't bear to hurt her father's feelings. But she had been able to hurt her lover's feelings. What was weakness on the one hand was certainly strength on the other. Perhaps there was no weakness at all; perhaps her whole attitude had been one of strength, of willful, selfish strength.

Blind Rage

Gentle, loving, tender women don't jilt a man because they disapprove of his career, unless that career is dishonorable. But strong, willful women do as they please. Sue was one of these. Of course she was anything else. He, Durant, had incurred censure because he had defended Tony Gazotti. So Sue had thrown him over. Tom Siddall had incurred disgrace because he was believed to have murdered Mimi Montagne. So Sue had thrown him over. Of course she had. She had dismissed Durant from the case and was now on terms of intimacy with Crelliman.

To hell with her! His quick rage blinded him so that the lights of the penthouse below were blurred. He rose and started with unsteady steps for the door. He had accomplished nothing tonight; he had accomplished nothing since Sue asked him to help Siddall. But that didn't mean that he wouldn't accomplish something before he finished. He'd have Siddall released from jail and Crelliman on his way to the chair before he got through.

He wouldn't do it for Sue; he'd do it out of common decency, and he'd have one brief conversation with the girl he had thought he loved, after Siddall's release. Siddall would be present at that interview; Siddall would know that while he languished in a cell, tortured by terror, Sue had been visiting Crelliman in his penthouse.

HUDSON ON HIS LAST VOYAGE (1610)

Henry Hudson, a navigator, took possession of the Hudson River (named after him) for the Dutch (1609). In April, 1610, he set out to sea again, reached Greenland, discovered the "Hudson Straits" and "Hudson Bay."

A mutiny broke out among his 23 sailors. They put Hudson, his son and a few infirm sailors into a small boat, delivering it to the mercy of the waves and savages. Their fate has never been learned. (U. S. History.)

VOTING MACHINE

In a democratic country people express their will by secret ballot. To eliminate cheating, which would frustrate the fundamental purpose, voting machines have been designed. They consist of a series of controls by which the voter registers his will without possible interference or falsification. (Problems of Democracy.)

THE DESTRUCTION OF JERUSALEM (586 B. C.); JEREMIAH LAMENTING

Nebuchadnezzar (604-561) restored Babylonian's vanished splendor, founding the Second Empire. He rebuilt Babylon, embellished with magnificent buildings and "Hanging Gardens." His capture of Jerusalem, the last stronghold of Judea, the southern portion of the once-powerful kingdom of Solomon, marked the climax of his power. The defeated king, Zedekiah, is seen bound to the victors' chariot, his eyes put out, carried away, with his people, into slavery.

Hardly 50 years after Jerusalem's destruction, the Babylonians were conquered by Persia's great warrior, Cyrus (539 B. C.). (World History.)

High-grade potatoes are developed by the tuber unit method. The best tubers of the crop are selected and planted through successive seasons. Only the most desirable are kept for seed. FUEL FEED BY VACUUM

Gasoline is lifted from the main tank (rear) by vacuum (in the manifold) into the vacuum tank from which it flows to the carburetor.

CARBURETORS

Carburetors convert gasoline into vapor and mix it with air under suction of the engine. The gas is taken as fine spray from one or more nozzles, built into the carburetor, by the lifting effect of rushing air. The gasoline level is kept constant by: (1) An overflow pipe; or (2) by a float and a valve. The fuel consumption is regulated by a throttle valve and sometimes a needle valve. SOLAR SYSTEM BY EXPLOSION

This hypothesis assumes that a star consisting of a glowing mass of gas increased the speed of its whirl under influence of electrical forces. It bulged and broke; the smaller part, extracting masses of gases, finally disappeared. The remaining part became our sun and the masses of gases our planets and their satellites. Junior Patrol Mail Box

Everyone likes to get letters, fellows.

But not everyone knows how to write a good letter. Did you ever stop to think that writing a good letter is an art which you can do better if you want to do it?

Lots of letters come here to headquarters for the Junior Patrol Mail Box. Most of them are very interesting and pleasant to read, but some—a few—don't say much.

When you write a letter, try to tell your friends interesting things. Tell them what you are doing, what you are planning and what you think about all sorts of things. It's lots of fun, and if your friends live far away and you hardly ever see them, your letters should be just like a visit together.

One interesting letter was from Lois Doelfel, of 129 Greenfield avenue. Good for you, Lois. She writes:

"I sent six members in a few days ago. Here are seven more. Please send me a badge to be captain. We are having a fine time at our meetings of the Junior Patrol.

"We have the meetings on Friday at 7 o'clock. The one who draws the best gets a prize. Everybody wrote the pledge and learned it. Ours is a very nice club."

Did you hear about this, fellows? Here's a very good idea in a letter from Miss Ora Rousseau, teacher in the La Grange School at Pricedale, Pa. She says:

"Enclosed is a number of applications for the Junior Patrol from my classroom. I think the patrol is a very good thing for the boys and girls. Please see that badges are sent to them."

Why not elect a captain right away and hold meetings in your reporting room after school? Just think of all the things you could do!

Here's a letter from James Hoover, of 228 Forty-fifth street, containing 10 pledges. Good work, isn't it? We're mighty glad to get letters like his:

"I have a new club, so will you please send me 10 buttons? Send them with an armband for me to my house so I can give them to the other fellows."

One Hundred Years Ago Today

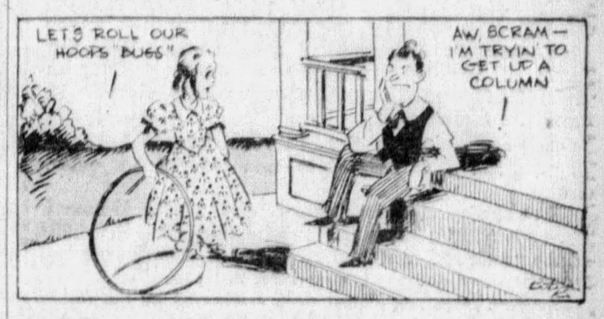
Judge Clayton discovered you could get a gallon of oil from two bushels of cotton seed. The Vice President moved from the White House because he was tired of answering the doorbell.

The tomato was supposed to be poison and was known as the love-apple. That superstition has since been canned.

One hundred years ago there was no Republican Party. So things haven't changed much.

It required six weeks to sail across the Atlantic Ocean. A man who had been to Europe was pointed out in the streets. That was before city service and public utilities.



Calhoun and Webster were ripsnorting orators and lawyers. They could talk the lids off iron kettles. When those two argued on opposite sides of a case they were so enthralling that nobody left the court room except the prisoner.

A century ago all future Presidents were working on the Erie Canal. A Harvard man wouldn't talk to a Yale man. If he had the Yale man wouldn't have answered him anyway.

Up at Troy, New York, Maj. Dalrymple or somebody like that, was teaching boys the game of one-old cat. Three years later, he drew the first baseball diamond and Jake Ruppert's grandfather started saving up for Babe Ruth.

Jenny Lind was just a little girl in Sweden learning to sing. There was no radio, no megaphones, no crooning, no vo-dee-dos, no hot-chas and no hill-billy bands. All poor music lovers had was music.

At that time we were working for Horace Greeley. Horace decided that one of us had to go west. We each tossed up a coin and Horace kept both. He was a goodhearted man and wept when his hungry sheep were chased out of a neighbor's pasture. We went to Hollywood and worked in the first movie with Mack Sennett and Lew Cody.

Hard Water

The Struggle Against Acidity Is Becoming More Difficult and More Expensive.

In announcing the appointment of a citizens' advisory committee on water control Dr. W. W. McFarland, director of the Department of Health, says:

"The matters of safety and potability of the water supply are not now in question. There is, however, the consideration of the future effect that increased stream pollution may have. There is the further question of whether, at some future time, the city may not wish to secure its supply of water for domestic use from some source other than the rivers. It would seem that some thought might be given to the conditions under which such a move might be indicated."

Only one person has died of typhoid fever in Pittsburgh this year, and he is believed to have contracted it outside the city.

Five hundred and three persons died of typhoid fever in Pittsburgh in 1904; 368 in 1905; 508 in 1906, and 505 in 1907. And the population of Pittsburgh was much smaller then than now, Allegheny not yet having been annexed.

Typhoid fever has almost been eradicated by the Aspinwall filtration plant, which began operations in 1908. The sand and gravel filters screen out the disease-breeding bacteria, and to make assurance doubly sure the water is chlorinated —one pint of liquid chlorine to a million gallons of water.

Why, then, does Dr. McFarland suggest that it may be advisable at some future time to secure our supply of water for domestic use from some source other than the rivers? The answer probably lies in the increasing difficulty that is being encountered in combatting the acidity—or hardness—of the water.

On September 1 of this year the acidity of the Allegheny River water at the Aspinwall filter plant reached a new peak —76 parts of acid to a million parts of water. The previous high mark was 70 parts per million on September 22, 1931.

It became necessary to use huge quantities of soda ash to neutralize the acidity and make the water fit for use. It was applied at the rate of 3,000 pounds an hour; and as it costs $31 a ton, the daily cost to the city was $1,116. As late as September 4 the city was still using 1,200 pounds of soda ash an hour, with the river acidity at 30 parts per million.

It did not become necessary to use soda ash to combat acidity until 1917; but since then the amount required has been increasing. Formerly acidity did not become bad until June; but this year the struggle started in February. So far this year about 1,400,000 pounds of soda ash have been required, and it is estimated that the city's total expenditure for soda ash in 1933 will be $27,000, or $10,000 more than Council appropriated for the purpose.

What would happen if the city did not use soda ash in the water? It would be too hard for washing. Even as things stand now, it is said that Pittsburghers have to use more soap and washing compounds than the people of other cities, and that, by reason of the destruction of the cellulose fibers in linen and cotton garments by the acid in the water, clothing does not last as long here as elsewhere. Plumbing fixtures are corroded and the boilers of steam engines in which city water is used soon are coated with a scale and become unfit for use.

Water is potable with an acid content of 100 parts per million, though the question has been raised if it is desirable to put into one's stomach a liquid that is injurious to the boiler of a locomotive.

Will Pittsburgh, without undue expense, be able to keep the acid content below 100 parts per million?

On September 3, when the acidity was so great that its effect was felt in the Ohio River far below Pittsburgh, and the public authorities of Ohio and West Virginia protested, analysis of the water of some of the tributaries of the Allegheny River, from which we get our supply, showed 134 parts of acid per million in the Kiskiminetas River at Leechburg, 138 parts of acid in the Conemaugh River at Saltsburg, 290 parts of acid in the Loyalhanna Creek at Saltsburg, and 4,500 parts of acid in Getty Run at Slickville.

The acid apparently comes for the most part from coal mines, and particularly abandoned mines. Sulphuric acid is formed when water trickles through the workings.

Of interest in this connection is the report of the State Department of Mines that in the five years from 1927 to 1932 about one-fourth of the bituminous coal mines in Pennsylvania—or 512, to be exact—were permanently abandoned, while of the 1,528 mines still nominally available for operation many are filled with water and their openings have caved in.

It may be that the acidity of the rivers can be abated somewhat by sealing abandoned mines. Thomas Liggett has been conducting some experiments of this character on behalf of the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Izaak Walton League, which is interested because the acid kills fish. (The Monongahela River, which is more acid than the Allegheny, is now, biologically speaking, a dead river, since no form of aquatic life can survive in it.)

The greatest hope of success in combatting acidity lies in the proposed flood control reservoirs now under consideration by the National Recovery Administration. The release of impounded flood water, by diluting the acid, would greatly improve conditions.

In its report of 1912 the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh said that with the 13 reservoirs then proposed for the Allegheny basin the flow of the Allegheny at Kittanning and Freeport at times of low water could be increased over three times, and the minimum discharge of the Kiskiminetas at Avonmore could be increased six times.

After pointing out how this dilution would reduce the hardness of the water, the Flood Commission showed that manufacturers would save money by not having to buy so much soda ash and that the people would save money by not having to buy so much soap. What is said in regard to soap is worth quoting, but it is to be borne in mind that the report was issued 21 years ago:

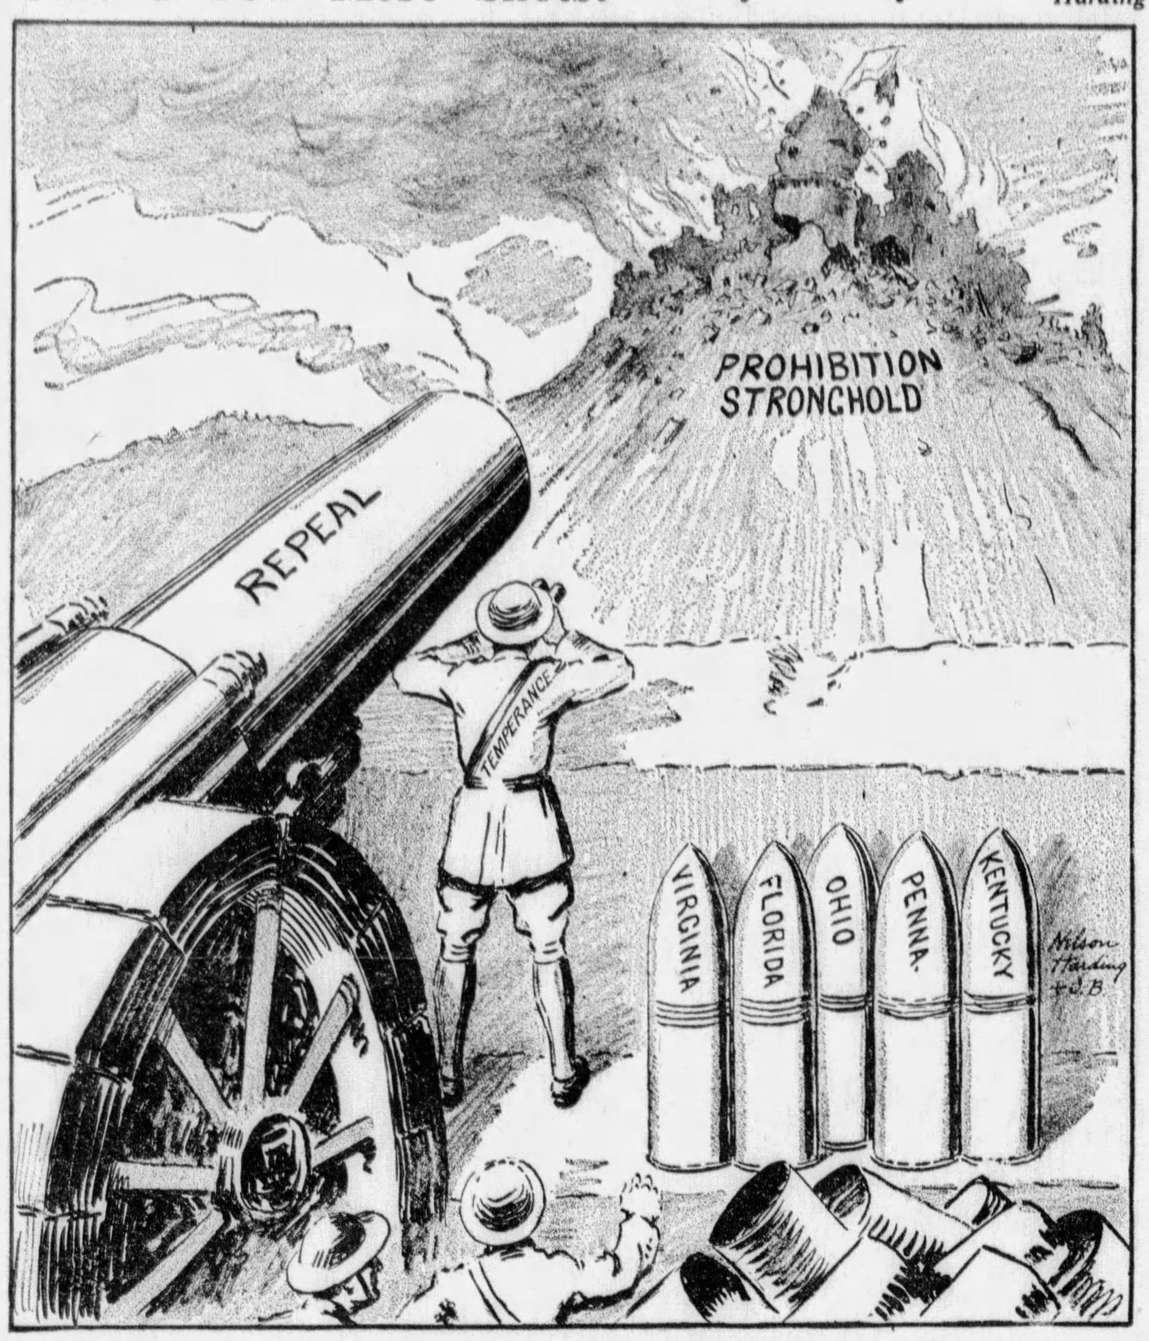
"The saving in soap that would have been effected by the above reduction in the hardness of the Allegheny in the district supplied with water by the City of Pittsburgh may be estimated as follows: For every increase of one part per million of hardness, the cost of soap increases about $10 per million gallons of water completely softened. There is probably no city in the world where there is a larger amount of water per capita softened with soap, and it is considered that 10 gallons per capita per day thus softened is a conservative estimate. On this basis, 5,000,000 gallons per day are used with soap by the 500,000 population supplied with water by the City of Pittsburgh. As has been shown, the dilution of the Allegheny in 1909 would have reduced the average daily hardness 26 parts per million for 137 days. At $10 per million gallons of one part per million reduction in hardness, this would mean an average daily saving of $1,300, or a total for 137 days of $178,100."

And of course there would be heavy savings of like character in other communities on the Allegheny, and also on the Ohio, while the storage basins on the Monongahela would render a similar service to the people who draw their water from that stream.

The storage reservoir project, in short, may enable Pittsburgh to postpone for many years, if not forever, consideration of the question of looking for a new source of supply of water.

Just a Few More Shots!

By Nelson Harding



Those lofty walls, once thought so strong,
Have not resisted very long
When by that heavy gun attacked,
But now are shattered, pierced and cracked.

And the besiegers will have won;
For smoke and flame and crumbling wall
Proclaim the stronghold's certain fall.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Are Women Good Sports?

Can women "take it?" Are they good sports?

* * *

* * *

Most business and professional women are the best sports in the world; because they have been out and battled with life, and still retain the tenderness and sympathy of women, at heart.

During my long illness, last winter, my women friends stood by me and pulled me through. That's ONE kind of sportsmanship. Most men just "can't be bothered" with a nervous or ailing woman. She gives them the jitters. When it comes to endurance, patience and understanding, women are splendid sports.

* * *

On the other hand, it must take super-sportsmanship for the beaten, blood-soaked loser in a prize-fight, to stagger to his feet and hold out his hand to the man who has just broken his nose or knocked out his teeth. That's ANOTHER kind of sportsmanship.

* * *

Recently I wrote a series of four short articles (designed only to amuse) in which I described the "Perfect Bore." They were entitled, respectively, "How To Shake A Woman," "How To Get Rid Of A Man," "How To Get Rid of A Husband" and "How To Get Rid of A Wife."

The first three were apparently accepted as satire and brought me only bouquets. But, believe it or not, that last one (How To Get Rid of A Wife) brought down on my head a barrage of brickbats from my own sex.

* * *

Since the Wall Street Follies of 1929, thousands of women have gallantly stood by their ruined and defeated husbands and shown their magnificent sportsmanship by putting their shoulders to the wheel and helping to bring home the bacon. Every man who went down in the big crash knows, by this time, whether or not he married a "good sport."

* * *

On the other hand, the alimony jails have been filled with victims, who could not continue to supply their ex-wives with the usual luxuries. And some women have come to regard breach of promise suits as a profitable and perfectly legitimate means of livelihood. Rotten sports!

* * *

There are good sports and poor sports of both sexes. But, whether you are a woman or a man, a Red Cross nurse or a prizefighter, the finest thing that you can BE in this world is A GOOD SPORT!

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 27.—A view from this window of the Ritz Carlton includes magnificent public gardens and the famous Boston common, which I always want to pluralize. Also in the vista is the tragic statue of a mounted Washington, a sculptor's crowning achievement.

But unveiled, the horse's open mouth was tongueless. So the sculptor, as a supreme sacrifice for artistic neglect, ended his life. One thinks of Boston in ranging scale. Of Harvard on the placid Charles. Of the Atlantic Monthly floriating lavender languor in a residential brown stone.

Of Thompson's Spa, where tipless beauties in varnished box stalls zing push buttons and purr through speaking tubes for food. Of howling newsies in the helter skelter of pigs-in-clover streets. But outstanding is a suppressed dignity no other American city attains. Nearest is New Orleans.

There's a tiny look to Boston. Unusual because a cultured people are seldom chic. Leipzig, for instance. I especially like the zigzag of alleys—all numbered so police may respond instantly to crime. There is a Newspaper Alley. Every city should have a Newspaper Alley smelly of printer's ink.

* * *

Boston has changed since my last visit, with Bill Hogg, 10 years ago. One misses somehow the omniscient Boston bag. Also those midnight senders-out for coffee and sandwiches in brown sacks. Many strictly Boston characters are over the horizon. Like Jimmy Benson. Leisurely stay-outs with a gab who knew all the troupers and big shots, showing up at 10 p. m. brightly barbered and humorously honed and retiring at dawn.

* * *

This was once an 18-week theatrical stop, next to Chicago the best show town outside New York. But it met the fate of Chicago and New York. The old Colonial, where the Follies played, has gone cinema. The Tremont has only puffs of legitimate experimentation. Even artistocratic Brookline and that plutocratic peak, Chestnut Hill, have movies.

* * *

Boston diction always inspires a cut-glass awe among outlanders. One may acquire an Oxonian accent, but never the pure Back Bay. I enjoy, too, the vernacular of crossing cops, especially their "dee-pawt" for depart and "tee-unn" for turn. After all, there's gold in them New England twang. Look thar', stranger, at Rudy Vallee. O yes, The Six Little Tailors still stitch on a midtown corner.

* * *

Outside rue Mouffetarde, back of the Pantheon, no tiny thoroughfare has a greater tug for slummers than Boston's Salem street, leading to the old North Church, heart of the Italian quarter. A street seething with haggling hucksters and their cries. Autos can only itch along and purchases from push carts and tiny shops are made through car windows.

* * *

The old North Church, of sooty brick, was a pivotal point in Paul Revere's immortal lantern swinging gallop. Ragged young alien corn pops on the running board to tell how the signal lantern of Paul Revere displayed in the steeple April 18, 1775, warned a tense countryside of the march of British troops to Lexington and Concord.

* * *

Boylston street has the biggest of the brightly awninged sidewalk cafes. Probably twice the size of New York's largest, Chatham walk. And almost the size of the Cafe de la Paix. It manages to acquire a diluted continental aura, and despite the autumnal chill, was well patronized.

* * *

We dined at the highly bespoke Longfellow's Wayside Inn at Sudbury—like Sunbury with a "code in de hed"—a 25-mile drive. Attendants try to give it an unnecessary and tip-toey historical hush. One rather longs to let go a war-whoop. Food is excellently home cooked and the Sixteenth Century house will delight students of period collections. It does not need to be hooked-up. As a lover of fresh, creamy milk I found the best ever tasted at this inn.

* * *

On the common this morning, walking the dog, the Boston's white harness seemed to churn a passing Biddy into fine fury. Pivoting slowly as we passed, she called with exquisite scorn "Shure and I'd ruther be afther dragging along a sick jack-ass!"

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

THE TRUTH IS, WE GET OUR LUCK WHEN WE MAKE IT.

The reason that most of us have little luck is that we don't get ready for it or go after it.

We want to be happy. We want to be successful. We want to be popular. We want to be powerful.

We like the FEELING of happiness, success, popularity. We like the ATMOSPHERE which accompanies happy, successful, popular, powerful people. We like to dream of ourselves in such an atmosphere. So we dream and yearn and sigh and rebel with feeble peevishness against our unsatisfactory lot. And wait for Lady Luck to come along and hand us opportunity on a silver platter.

But Lady Luck doesn't function that way.

THE TRUTH IS THAT LUCK ISN'T A LADY, DISPENSING FAVORS. SHE'S A CAFETERIA, WHERE YOU'VE GOT TO DO YOUR OWN PICKING AND PACK YOUR OWN PLATTER.

It will do you little good to go into a cafeteria hungry and expect the combination salad to leap down your throat. You'd starve to death waiting. You must go after the salad. AND YOU MUST GO AFTER LUCK.

Know first, WHAT YOU WANT.

Don't present a lot of aimless yearnings to life. Have a definite plan of what you want to do and some sensible knowledge of your own capacity to do that thing.

IT'S NO USE WAITING TO BE A BARRYMORE IF YOU WERE ELECTED TO BE A STEVEDORE. There's logic in fortunes as there is in everything else.

KNOW WHAT YOU WANT.

WANT SOMETHING REASONABLE.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO STICK TO YOUR GOAL AND STAND THE GAFF—

AND YOU'LL BE LUCKY—

YOU'LL DRAW YOUR CHANCE TO YOU AS SURELY AS A MAGNET DRAWS IRON FILINGS.

For you will really have magnetized yourself—

By some mysterious, spiritual law we do draw things to us by our own desire, our own determination.

WE MAKE OUR OWN LUCK.

What we do with our chance after we get it—that's another matter.

Sometimes the salad we pick in the cafeteria gives us a whale of a tummy ache. Sometimes the fate which we wish on ourselves make us wish we hadn't. Often we bite off far, far more luck than we can chew.

BUT LUCK IS FOR THOSE WHO GO AFTER IT.

AND YOUR LUCK IS UP TO YOU.

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Siren Ships

That ships have such a lure for me;
For me, who never sailed away
From any port on bight or bay;
But it is true, all ships that go
To lands of sun or lands of snow,
Proud ships whose motion is like song
Or battered hulks that limp along,
Alike with beckoning gestures glide
To magic realms of wind and tide.
I joy because the ancients gave Us Venus, rising from the wave,
Poseidon and the Nereides fair
Who twine red seaweed in their hair;
And like Ulysses, ill-content
On any isle or continent,
To clutch my heart in witching grip

Text for Today

Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore,—

Psalms, xvi:11.

The Human Side of the News

The Fox Sisters' Feats—"Margery," Noted Medium

By EDWIN C. HILL

THE Spiritualist Church of America has just ended its annual convention in the city of New York. Flocking to that convention came hundreds of sincere men and women who are convinced that there is a bourne from which travelers do return. There is almost no field of human thought which inspires, on the one hand, so much passionate belief, and, on the other, so much contemptuous incredulity. That alone would make spiritualism an arresting subject.

In this country the cult received its impetus from the playfulness of two little girls, too young to be afraid of ghosts. These little girls were the Fox sisters, Kate, who was 11, and Margaret, who was 14. They lived with their parents in a plain little farmhouse at Hyattsville in New York State.

On the night of March 30, 1848, after family prayers had been said, everyone had gone to bed and the house was dark and silent, queer things took place. Heavy footsteps jarred the old house. Strange rappings were heard out in the hallways. And the next night the same, and so for many nights afterward, while the little girls, laughing gleefully clapped their hands—one-two-three-four—to signal the letters of the alphabet and talk to the intruding ghosts.

Then people began to come to the house to "sit in" at these weird conversations, and the fame of the house and of the Fox sisters spread through the land. Before long every city and hamlet in the country had its devotees, holding seances and giving manifestations of their powers as mediums.

* * *

Confesses Fraud, But Recants

THE two little girls, Kate and Margaret, grew up, toured the country and visited Europe, communing by rappings with the spirits of the departed—or so they averred. But scientists who studied them doubted and disputed their honesty, asserting that they produced the spirit rappings by cracking their knee and toe joints. The older sister, Margaret, confessed on one occasion that the seances were fraudulant, but later on recanted the confession.

The cult had received an impetus which kept it going and growing, because it went a little way, at least, to satisfy that intense longing of living humanity for some signal—some assurance—that all was well with those who had gone out into the dark.

There are few persons who have not had at some time in their lives an experience difficult to account for by plain reason—something seemingly lying outside the field of materialisms and human experience. Some of the greatest of modern scientists, Sir Oliver Lodge in particular, are confirmed spiritualists. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was an impassioned believer to the day of his death, and Lady Doyle clings to the belief.

Sir Oliver maintains that life is like a magnetic field. When a magnetic field ceases to operate it does not go out of existence. It does not "die." It merely closes up, so that its activity disappears from our ken. In the same way, he asserts, life does not go out of existence when it ceases to function on earth. It simply moves into another ken where it is not perceptible to human eyes or audible to human ears—mediums excepted.

* * *

"Margery" Studied By Professors

THE most celebrated of woman mediums in this country in recent years is she who is known by spiritualists simply as "Margery." Harvard professors watched her closely, and while they could discover no palpable evidences of fraud or fakery, came to the conclusion that her performances were not supernatural.

Spiritualism in its widest sense goes back beyond the memory of man. There were soothsayers in the old Biblical days. The voodoo doctors of the Haitian jungles, the Zulu witch doctors of Africa and the fakirs of Hindustan have done things in the broad daylight, before the startled eyes of skeptical white men, for which there is no accounting on the basis of cold reason. But there have been so much fraud and trickery and so many dishonest mediums that the average person shies away from anything which carries the brand of spiritualism.

Personally, I scarcely see why it should be necessary to sit in a charmed circle and receive cryptic messages, often in curiously bad grammar, from those that have gone on, provided, that is, that spirits are permitted in the divine scheme of things to communicate with their brothers and sisters held prisoner by the clay. And yet I do not utterly disbelieve, for flat and dogmatic disbelief is merely another form of intolerance. Shakespeare's is the intelligent philosophy: "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio". . .

And there is too much testimony from sincerely sensible people to permit one's mind to close like a clam shell against any beliefs in the supernatural. Man has learned a lot in the last 70 or 80 centuries; but he has drifted a long way from the heart of Nature, and from the forces behind and perhaps above Nature. And down through the long ages many things have been lost, many bits of knowledge, many secrets which we shall never know again.

GAY HEARTS

By Winifred Black

Well, well, grandpa, so you believe a man is as old as he feels! And you feeling just about 20, took a pair of roller skates and went out to the park and did a gorgeous slippery, slithery, slidy, glidey, coast down one of the highest hills in the place.

But something happened either to you or one of the skates or to the side of the hill—anyhow down you stayed till they carried you to the receiving hospital and patched you up.

And were you down hearted?

You joked with the doctor, "kidded" the nurse, and told the hospital orderly to come around some time when he was off duty, and you'd show him how a well-known man about town skates, when he goes skating.

Hurrah for you grandpa, and many of 'em.

You aren't going to sit in the corner and let the young fellows have all the fun are you?

Honestly now, when you were lying there in the hospital with your leg in a cast didn't you love to drop to sleep so you could dream of the glorious rush of the wind as you spun down that terrific hill? Why it was like flying! Did your coat fly out just as it used to back in the good old days when you and Jim Healey skated for the ice skating championship way back yonder when you screwed a hole in the heel of your shoe, and buckled the front of your skates on with a leather strap?

Didn't it take you back to the day you took little Molley Merrydew coasting in the snow, and Molley said she was afraid of coasters and she wouldn't go unless you took the front of the sled yourself?

What ever happened to Molley Merrydew, I wonder?

Everybody thought you and she would make a match, but she was never the same after she went to the city for that visit with her city cousin.

Lots of girls you've known since you knew Molley, haven't you, grandpa, pretty ones, and good ones, and naughty ones, but they none of them were ever quite like Molley, were they?

And you 72 years old, tut, tut, can't you fill up your mind with radios and the new theories about thought transference, and what's ahead of you when you say goodbye to this world? Didn't you go to hear Professor Somebody the other night tell all about the balance of trade and the effect of civilization on morals? And here you are thinking about pretty little Molley and the way her eyes sparkled when she tied in her chin with her blue hood ribbons—shame on you, grandpa, but I'm for you just the same, you and your courage and your zip and your pep. I'd rather spend an hour talking with you than to listen to all the finespun theories about this, that and the other in the wide world.
